CHARGES WERE PREFERRED

Street Commissioner Lukaszevig Haled Before Council and Hearing Adjour ned to Next Monday Evening.

The council held another special meeting last evening, those present when the roll was called being Mayor Walters and Ald. Abb, Cook, Firkus, McDonald, Scribner, Sparks and Urowski. Ald. McDonald made a "call of the house" and Chief of Police Haf soos was sent after the absentees.

Mayor Walters spoke of the excellent work that has been done on some of our streets by using the steam roller after a rain, and recommended that it be used on Church street, the Jordan road and other thoroughfares at the first opportunity.

A motion to supply each engine house with a bath tub, both to cost not to exceed $150, and giving the committee on fire department power to act, was adopted. The mayor and Ald. Abb advocated the using of tar on some of our streets, or as much thereof as can be secured at the local gas plant, and the board of public works were authorized to place it on Church street, from the railway crossing to Rice street.

At this time the council desired to take a recess until the chief of police could report, but D. L. Sickles, attorney for Street Commissioner Paul Lukaszevig, who had been summoned to appear before the meeting to show cause why he should not be removed from office, objected to a recess and said he would file a general denial to the complaint.

The recess, however, was taken and thereafter John Corcoran, who will furnish the city with street signs, suggested that permission be secured from the electric light and telephone companies to use their poles, where convenient, for putting on the signs, and also that signs be put up at the city limits for the convenience of automobile owners and others. These matters were left to the committee on highways.

When the roll was called after the recess it was found that the chief had secured two absentees, Ald. Altenburg and Redfield, the latter being routed from bed, although it was only about 8:30, and Ald. Heffron, Schenk and Port were reported out of the city. The call of the house was raised, and the clerk read a written complaint from the mayor, charging Paul Lukaszevig with being unfit for service, owing to the excessive use of liquor, that he had been insubordinate, incompetent and had neglected his duties all during the past sixty days, when he had promised to abstain, and work had been delayed through his fault. The complaint, a copy of which had been served by the chief, was sworn to by Deputy Clerk Finch.

Sickles, Piffner entered a demur to the complaint, and on motion of Ald. Redfield the demur was overruled. The attorneys also made a general denial to the charges, and then Ald. Cook was called to the chair by the mayor.

Ald. Abb wanted the hearing postponed until Monday evening at 8 o'clock, but Mr. Sickles objected to any adjournment, saying the council had no jurisdiction in the matter, and that his client was present and ready for trial. City Atty. Owen stated that he had been busy on other matters, was not prepared at this time, and asked that the hearing be continued. A motion to adjourn was then put and carried, after which a motion to continue the case until next Monday evening at 8 o'clock was also adopted.

Settle Wallpaper Strike.

The strike which has been in progress at the Phoenix Wall Paper plant for the past couple of weeks was settled this morning and practically all the old force returned to work this afternoon. No formal demand had been made on the company by the striking employees and in consequence there was nothing to adjust. While the local officials decline any information, it is supposed that the men returned to work at the old wages.

Close Call by Section Men.

Wm. Hass and several members of his section crew had a remarkably close call from being killed while going to their work on a hand car last Monday morning. Mr. Hass's district runs north and west of Stevens Point and they left the local station shortly after seven o'clock, expecting to have a clear track on which to propel their car. They had just reached the deep cut in the O'Conor stone quarry, west of the railroad bridge, when a special train of Canadian Pacific coaches drove in sight. The men had barely time to jump to safety when the handcar was hit by the locomotive and broken into splinters. Fortunately no one of the crew was hurt and the engine was only slightly damaged.

Superior to Any Ever.

Among the notable scenes of Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" which is to come to the Grand next Tuesday evening, is the St. Claire home, showing a tropical garden with its fragrant magnolia and orange trees, among which nestles the typical southern plantation residence, the home of little Eva; Legree's cotton plantation of the Red River, with the cotton in full bloom; the wild rocky pass in southern Ohio, and the ice choking Ohio river by moonlight. The transformation entitled, "The Celestial City," is said to be the most magnificent tableau ever conceived. In offering his revival to our city, Mr. Martin not only claims that the scenic effects are superior to any ever attempted, but honestly assures prospective patrons that the company is composed of the most capable talent obtainable.

That New Hospital.

The officers and directors of the City Hospital Association met on Friday evening last, at which time a committee consisting of D. E. Frost, B. B. Park, H. J. Finch and Dr. von Neupert, Sr., was selected to solicit funds with which to construct the much needed structure, or at least make a start along that line. It was further reported that a gentleman had offered a site for the contemplated new hospital, the location being a desirable one, but the name of the donor cannot be made public at this time. The names of Dr. F. A. Southwick and E. W. Sellers were added to the list of directors, and by virtue of his position, Mayor Walters is also an ex-officio director. The soliciting committee will no doubt soon commence work.

SAD ENDING TO JOURNEY

Mrs. Josephine Kutz Comes Here From Chicago to Secure Farm and Meets With Death in Runaway.

Mrs. Josephine Kutz, accompanied by Wadislaus Bednowicz, arrived in Stevens Point on the Soo train last Sunday morning from Chicago. Soon thereafter they secured a horse and buggy at the J. S. Pipe livery barn and drove northwest into the town of Carson for the purpose of looking at a farm that Mrs. Kutz expected to purchase or secure in exchange for Chicago property. The farm is said to have been owned by Mr. Arndt, the man who was killed in a runaway on Clark street, a couple of months ago, and the trade was being engineered by John Nowatski, a Chicago real estate agent, who sent Bednowicz along to show her the property.

On the way back they arrived at the A. F. Grubba place, about three miles from the city, at 12:30 o'clock. The man jumped out of the buggy, leaving the woman in charge of the horse, which was a quiet animal, never known to run away. He had been gone but a few moments, however, when the horse started, undoubtedly due to its anxiety to go home, as well as to being bothered by flies. In her excitement, not being accustomed to driving, Mrs. Kutz pulled upon one line, turning the horse round and round, until the buggy came in contact with a telephone post, when she was thrown or jumped against the post with terrible force. She was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried into the Grubba residence, where she died about five minutes later. Death was due to internal injuries, she having struck the post with her breast, but one cheek and her chin were also cut and bruised.

Coroner Boston was notified of the accident and the body was brought here and prepared for burial. The man who accompanied the woman did not know her name, but the real estate agent was communicated with and Tuesday morning M. F. Derengowski, a Chicago undertaker, accompanied by J. O. Smed, arrived here and took the body back on the afternoon Soo train. Mr. Smed occupies the first floor of a building at 1602 W. Superior street, Chicago, which is owned by Jos. Kutz, husband of the deceased, while the Kutz family occupy the upper floor. Mr. Kutz is a journeyman tailor. Mrs. Kutz, who was about 50 years of age, is survived by her husband, six sons and one daughter, the youngest about six years of age. This was indeed a sad ending to expectations that seemed bright for a good landed investment.

Buy Out L. C. Scribner.

Carl Thompson and Bert Halsted, who are engaged in the general merchandise business at Abbotsford, have been in town this week taking an inventory of L. C. Scribner's stock of groceries and provisions at 622 Ellis street and the formal transfer to them will take place today or tomorrow. Mr. Halsted will become a permanent resident of Stevens Point, as will also a brother of Mr. Thompson, and they will take active charge of the business so successfully conducted during the past several years by Mr. Scribner. The latter gentleman has not fully decided as to his future activities, but will take a much needed rest for a few weeks at least.

Mr. Halsted is no stranger here, having been a resident of Stevens Point for quite a few years before moving to Abbotsford. Mr. Thompson is also known to many of our people, having made this city his headquarters for a time while employed on the Wisconsin Central.

Official Figures Show That Portage County Democrats Were Derelict to Party Duty.

The board of county canvassers, consisting of County Clerk Bourn, Judge Morat and Robt. Maine, met at the court house on Friday and finished their work on Saturday, which is given in detail below. Not a Democrat on the ticket received the necessary 20 per cent, "according to law," the highest figure being 359, whereas 478 were necessary to place the county candidates on the official ballot, but there will be something doing before the first snow flies. The total vote cast for the various candidates follows:

Bull Had Hydrophobia.

A young bull owned by a farmer residing near Torun, in the town of Hull, is said to have been bitten by a dog that had hydrophobia recently. Last week the bull showed such unmistakable signs of being inoculated with the disease, becoming most ferocious, that it was shot and killed.

New Dry Goods Store.

Wm. Sax and Henry Moeschler left for Chicago last night to buy a complete stock of dry goods and gents' furnishings for the new store they will open in the Fuller building at 1008 Division street. They expect to be ready for business some time next week.

Both gentlemen are well known in this city, although Mr. Sax had been in Colorado for quite a few years and only recently returned here. He was a former employee of Beni Burr & Son when they were engaged in business at the South Side. The junior member of the firm had for the past eleven years been employed at the C. O. D. store, and is thoroughly conversant with the lines he is about to handle. There is a good opening for a dry goods store at the South Side and we predict that Sax & Moeschler will make a success of their new venture.

Just a Woman's Way.

It may truthfully be said that "Just a Woman's Way," which comes to the Grand on Thursday evening of this week, tells a story that is as new and entertaining as its title. It deals with a theme that is daring and delicate, but withal one that is a serious problem in our every day life. The author, Mr. Pascoe, in his development of the theme has produced characters and situations that amaze one with the powerful frankness of the delineation. Avoiding the old well worn lines laid down by most playwrights, he has produced a play that shows clearly his belief that there are men who are not tailor dummies, heroes who can show their manhood by nobler signs than a contempt for all decency, and heroines who sometimes blush and whose hearts respond to the real passion that pervades the world go round. He evidently believes that our everyday life, the emotions that constantly assail us, for good or bad, the complex situations that constantly occur in the lives of all men and women form a very good plot for a play. Mr. Pascoe makes a most determined assault upon a common theme, the until this time avoided, fact of our everyday life, and the unusualness of this theme and his daring treatment of it, has won for him a well merited success.

Bliss' Native Herbs.

Wm. Dowsett, who was recently retired on a pension as an engineer on the Soo line, has taken the local agency for the school of this year. Each Friday afternoon during school periods some member of the faculty or citizen from the city will speak on problems of the day or matters of local interest. President Sims began the series with a most excellent talk on "The Interest of the Student in Political Questions." Next Tuesday afternoon Prof. Spindler speaks on "William James, the noted psychologist and scholar of Harvard, who recently passed away. The speaker is cordially invited to these talks.

Boy Wanted.

One who is desirous of learning the printer's trade, and wishes to become a member of the art preservative, can secure a position by calling upon The Gazette.

Nearly fifty witnesses have been called on behalf of the city, and if the hearing has no other result, it will probably have the effect to make local rates uniform, if they are not at present, and to set a value on the company plant so that the city may purchase the same in the future if it so desires.

Their Infant Son.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Breitenstein, of Stockton, mourn the loss of their infant son, George J., aged 4 months and one week, whose departure occurred at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. Besides the parents, three brothers and one sister survive. They are Myron, Alma, Coral and Edward. The little one had not been in good health since birth. The funeral will be held from St. Mary's Catholic church at Custer, Rev. Geo. A. Schemmer officiating, at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Married at High Noon.

The Sunday School Lesson for Next Sunday.

By W. H. Fuller

Continuing our study of the teachings and incidents of Tuesday of Passion week, we come at this time to a perusal of three questions, two of which the Pharisees put to Jesus, while the third Jesus asked of the Pharisees. When the Savior's enemies no longer dared by reason of popular favor, to make an openly violent attack upon him, they resorted to more insidious methods of causing his defeat. They hoped, as on this occasion, to force Jesus to incriminate, or at least discredit himself, by cornering him with tricky questions.

Question number one. This had reference to the payment of taxes. "Is it lawful to pay tribute to Caesar, or not?" It is interesting to note the complimentary (") attitude of the questioners, who approached the Master as follows: "Teacher, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, and carest not for any one; for thou regardest not the person of men." In other words, "One who is so absolutely truthful and impartial as you are, will surely be able to enlighten us concerning our duty in the most important matter on which we now seek your opinion."

It is more important to observe the parties who unite in this inquiry, viz: The Pharisees and the Herodians. The former were leaders in the Jewish nationalist party which was opposed to the political supremacy of Rome. The Herodians, on the other hand, were advocates of national submission to the emperor, rather than asserters of independence.

The dilemma into which the questioners think they have led Jesus at once appears. If he replies "yes," will he not show himself a traitor to the Jewish nation? And if he answers "no" will he not make himself guilty of rebellion against Rome?

But Jesus was never taken off his guard, and he was in no wise disturbed by this catch question. Calling for one of the imperial coins, and directing their attention to the likeness and superscription of the Caesar upon it, Jesus answered his questioners as follows: "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's." In these words the Master reminded his hearers that "the Jews had taken the emperor's money, and must therefore give it back." While this furnished an affirmative answer to the question, the words "render to God the things that are God's" corrected an error in the thought of the Pharisees, viz: That loyalty to God and submission to political authority must necessarily be in conflict.

To this day a great many people fail to understand what Jesus taught in the words above quoted, and that is that he who accepts the advantages and protection afforded by the government under which he lives, puts himself under obligation to contribute to the support of that government. The man who, under the pretense of having his citizenship in heaven excuses himself from voting and otherwise interesting himself in civic affairs, is a hypocrite, whether he knows it or not. The people who are too religious to mix in politics have simply got the wrong kind of religion. The responsibility for corruption in politics today belongs largely to a lot of folks who have seemed to think that churchgoing and hymn singing would bring in the kingdom of God even if they didn't go to the polls on primary and election days. And while these very nice people have been "enjoying" their religion the rascals have been left to run the government. Thank God for signs of an awakening to civic duty on the part of men in the churches.

Question number two. This was asked by a certain lawyer, one of the Pharisees, and apparently from a better motive than that which prompted the former inquiry. The question, at least, seems to evince a certain degree of moral earnestness; it is this: "Teacher, which is the great commandment in the law?" We are told that "the rabbis had divided the law of Moses into 365 prohibitions and 248 commands. And among these 613 prohibitions and commands they distinguished greater and lesser ones. It was a great sin, for instance, not to keep the rules in regard to fringes and phylacteries or in regard to the keeping of the Sabbath, but an infringement of some lesser command could be overlooked." Now Jesus was no casuist, and he care not a whit about such questions of debate. His ethics was founded on principle instead of rules. And so in the answer given to this second question the Master tries to give his questioner his own point of view from which he was able to determine his duty in any and every given condition. The answer is this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. And a second like unto it is this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments the whole law hangeth, and the prophets." While these words were not original with Jesus, yet he does make clear as no one else has ever done, the comprehensive nature of these two great laws of life. There is not a duty that ever confronts us but that it gets significance from its reference to one of these two commandments. And there is no problem of conduct but what may be solved if we will only throw upon it the light of this two-fold requirement of love to God and love to man. Selfishness blurs our vision of duty and deadens our sense of right. Love, on the contrary, enables us to find the path of light and renders our moral sensibilities more quickly responsive to every indication of God's mind and will.

Question number three. In asking this Jesus shows the Pharisees that he is able to worst them at their own game. Having confronted his questioners with the promptness and wisdom of his replies, he now takes his turn at them. "What think ye of the Christ? Whose son is he?" He well knew what their answer would be, for it had been but a day or two since the multitudes had shouted: "Hosanna to the Son of David!" When the Pharisees answered, Jesus continued to question them: "How then doth David in the spirit call him Lord?" In these words an appeal was made to the Pharisees' own interpretation of Psalm 110. The result was utter confusion in the minds of the Jews. Sonship and Lordship they could not predicate of the same person. And so in this verbal tilt which the Pharisees began with so much confidence, Jesus came off completely victorious, while his enemies were forever silenced. They knew better than ever again to pit their wisdom against that of the Prophet from Nazareth.

It were well if the reader, and every one, indeed, would take home the last one of these three questions: "What think ye of the Christ?" Jesus Christ is a fact, historical and eternal. Each mortal to whom the knowledge of Christ has come, is held accountable by God for an answer to this question which probes into the depths of our consciences and wills. If the evidence of scripture and experience warrants the conclusion that Jesus came as the Savior of the world, then one who accepts that conclusion is in duty bound to confess this same Jesus as his own personal Redeemer and Lord.

A MAN OF PRINCIPLE

Adolph J. Schmitz, the Democratic nominee for governor, is recognized in the following manner by Judge J. E. Dodge, one of our most eminent jurists: "In these times when the careers of candidates are being received in search of grounds of criticism and grievance, it is not unfeeling that the worthy acts in such careers be also recalled to active memory. To those earnest Democrats who participated in the stirring days of 1890 and 1892, in the hope and belief that their party principles were to again permanently dominate the government, state and national, and relieve the common people from their burdens in favor of Special Interests which Republican policy had placed on statute books, no act, among the many, of sacrifice of personal feelings, and ambitions to the cause of the party aroused more of admiration and enthusiastic gratitude, than that of the present candidate for governor, Adolph J. Schmitz. In 1892, party success was believed to depend on the ardent co-operation of the German-American element, especially strong in Manitowoc and Calumet counties. By the former, Schmitz was presented as candidate for congress, and his success was a matter of great interest through the nearby counties of Sheboygan, Washington, Ozaukee and Kewaunee.

The congressional convention was so manipulated by an opposing candidate that it was deadlocked and had to adjourn without nominating, under circumstances of great exasperation and unfairness to Mr. Schmitz and to the German element mentioned; their repudiation not only of the candidates for congress, but of the whole Democratic ticket, including the president, was threatened and imminent and might well have been effective to place Wisconsin in opposition to the party and to Cleveland. The party managers were shocked and despondent. In this crisis young Schmitz, instead of fomenting such a revolt as many might have done, or ever becoming apathetic, threw aside his personal grievance, ignored the insult to himself and to his adherents, by no means confined to the Germans, and at great personal sacrifice plunged ardently into the campaign, worked publicly and privately as no other man could have done, and not only held Wisconsin in support of Cleveland and Democracy, but even secured the election to congress of the man whom he, with much reason, felt had wronged him. At that time Democrats all over the state were loud in their professions of party gratitude. They should remember it now and see to it that Schmitz's nomination is not merely perfunctory or formal, but so enthusiastic as to signalize approval of unselfish devotion to a general cause."

Lived In One House 94 Years.

In the village of Stath (Somerset) on the banks of the River Parrett, resides William Broome, who has lived the whole of his life—ninety-four years—in the same cottage. The house is his own property. Broome has always enjoyed good health, is still very active and has never tasted medicine. He is a great-grandfather, grandfather and father, but only six of his descendants are living.—London Evening Standard.

Might Do It.

"Do you know anything that will kill potato bugs?" asked the young man with the yellow fingers. "Yes," said the old lady with the gingham apron crustily, "get 'em to smoke cigarettes." —Tonkens Statesman.

The Primary Story.

The primary election resulted in no real surprises of major character. The nomination of Senator La Follette was a foregone conclusion, equal in certainty to the nomination of A. J. Schmitz, unopposed, for governor on the Democratic ticket.

The fight for the nomination for governor on the Republican ticket was difficult of prediction as to result although there was an undertow manifest that caused a feeling that if McGovern's managers had succeeded sufficiently to make it appear to the great body of La Follette supporters that McGovern was the sub rosa choice of La Follette for governor, the grand sweep for La Follette would carry McGovern into the nomination.

That is just what happened to the situation. Whether he was such secret choice of La Follette or not—there was crafty efforts by La Follette to make it felt without saying so that McGovern was his secret choice and still be able to plead successfully an alibi on the charge were Lewis the nominee—the voters who stand for La Follette interpreted the situation favorably to McGovern in that respect and went to him in large numbers.

The Democrats have no doubt secured the twenty per cent. on the state ticket and on substantially all the congressional, state and assembly districts as well as on county tickets generally.

The next thing is the election. The Democrats have a strong ticket and by no means a hopeless case if it is rightly handled. There will be numerous blow-holes in the armor of the Republican ticket. If the Democratic nominees and managers have the head to find them and the courage to use the right ammunition on them, there is reason to believe that the tale of the battle in November will be an interesting one and of great profit to Democracy and advantage to the people.—Milwaukee Daily News.

CIRCUIT COURT JURORS

List of Those Drawn to Serve for Coming Term, Which Convenes on Monday, Oct. 3rd, 1910.

The jury commissioners, consisting of E. M. Copps of this city, Harmon Beggs of Almond, and L. L. Loberg of Nelsonville, met at the court house last Friday, at which time the following jury was drawn to serve at the coming term of circuit court, which convenes on Monday, Oct. 3d.

Alban—John Isadore, Carl Stenerson, Almond—Jos. Pionke, David Mehne, Almond village—A. D. Palmer, Belmont—Fred Frater, Buena Vista—Philip Sherman, Carson—Wm. Weinhold, A. L. Voyer, Wm. Slattery, Geo. Stertz, Dewey—Frank Richmond, Eau Pleine—P. O. Virum, Albert Bernhagen, Grant—W. H. Witt, Hull—John Bretschell, Lanark—Frank Stepp, Daniel Hopkins.

New Hope—E. P. Kalstad, Edwin Roe, Pine Grove—John Lowe, N. H. Beggs, Plover—W. A. Danforth, C. M. Barker.

Sharon—John Zinda, Geo. Somers, John Koltz, Stockton—Fred Ingwersen, Stevens Point—Jos. Glinski, Chas. Thoms, G. H. Altenburg, G. H. Deitrich, W. Rothman, Jas. Ballou, Chas. Chamberlain, H. H. Pagel.

New Fire Escape.

The new fire escape at the High school building, which extends from the ground to the third floor, has been installed. It is in two parts, or two flights, one 30 feet in length and the other 20 feet, and is attached to the east side of the building. The upper part of the fire escape is stationary, but the lower part swings up in a horizontal position, clear from the ground, when not in use.

Milk Dealer Arrested.

Albert Eichhorst, whose dairy farm is on the Jordan road, one mile northeast of the city, was arrested last Friday on complaint of B. B. Southard, a representative of the Dairy and Food commission, charged with selling adulterated milk, containing "less than eight and one-half per cent. of milk solids, not fat." The complaint charges that Eichhorst sold the milk to the complainant on the 19th of last month. An adjournment of the examination was taken for two weeks, or until Sept. 23d, the defendant entering a plea of not guilty, and gave bail for his appearance.

Over Two Billions.

The state tax commission, acting in its capacity as state board of assessment, on Saturday fixed the state assessment of all taxable property in Wisconsin for 1910 at $2,743,180,404, as against $2,602,549,798 last year, an increase of $140,630,606. The assessment of real estate is $2,108,140,021, as against $2,012,484,004 last year, and the personal property is $635,040,888, as against $590,065,974 last year.

All property in Portage county, both real and personal, is placed at $22,690,298, as against $21,280,829 last year, an increase of $1,411,469.

Will Locate in Oklahoma.

P. W. Clark, who has made his headquarters on an oil lease near Ramona, Okla., for the past few years, but whose property was a part of the recent big deal in New York, spent the latter half of the week in the city assisting his wife in preparing to move to the southwest. Both have departed for Pawhuska, Okla., where they will reside for a time, he having charge of some work near that place for the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co., but they expect to locate at Tulsa, a city of 25,000 population, where Mr. Clark has made arrangements to build a new residence. While hundreds of friends regret the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Clark, they trust it will be only temporary, and all will be pleased to know that he has met with fine financial success.

County Treasurer's Report.

The report of County Treasurer Dake for the month ending Aug. 31, 1910, is as follows:

Received in treasury Aug. 1, 1910..... $17,185.75

CLOSE SATURDAY AFTERNOONS.

By mutual agreement all the dental offices in the city will close each Saturday afternoon during the months of July, August and September. Make appointments and govern yourself accordingly. Dr. Franz Krems, Sec.

The only doubt to be thrown on the story of those quadrillions of microbes in frozen eggs is that it is almost beyond belief that any self-respecting microbe would relish that sort of food.

BEST EVER USED

A. B. Hienlein, Harrison, Idaho, says: I have used Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey for coughs and colds and it is the best I have ever tried. Look for the Bell on the bottle.

American tourists are reported to be the most eager patrons of dirigible balloons in Europe. Their experiences with the tip-custome in their travels seems to make them careless of life.

VIRTUE

Virtue by itself is not strong enough, or anything like it. It must have strength added to it and the determination to use that strength. Theodore Roosevelt.

HIS INTERFERENCE

The twists and turns taken by faking horse dealers to get out of their bad bargains are proverbial. A little incident illustrative of the tribe took place recently at a stable on North Broad street, where an irresponsible settler had succeeded in palming off a defective horse on a too easy buyer. The new owner turned up with the horse a few days after the purchase and angrily exclaimed, "Didn't you say this horse was perfectly safe and wouldn't trouble anybody?" The dealer coolly asked, "What's the matter with the horse?" The dupe replied, "You know well enough. He interferes badly." With a curt "Well, he doesn't interfere with anybody but himself, does he?" the fake dealer brushed the matter aside, and the purchaser found himself without a remedy.—Philadelphia Record.

"It is here, sir," replied Cascella. "I am the garrison."

INFATUATION

How many men are groaning in spirit at this moment over an infatuation that made them sacrifice the whole worth of life for the sake of a pretty face and a plastic manner?

HEBREW PROVERB

Happy the man that hath a beautiful wife; his days shall be increased.

A GREAT MILITARY FEAT

Nonza, in Corsica, is very proud of the story of a great military feat performed there long ago. It is told in "Romantic Corsica," by George Rennick.

The French in 1795 had subjugated all the northern cape with the exception of the tower of Nonza, which for a considerable time sustained a close siege. Attacking parties were driven back by a fierce fire, but at last the garrison agreed to surrender if allowed to march out with all the honors of war. This was conceded, and old Captain Cascella appeared, staggering under a load of muskets and pistols.

"Why is the garrison so long in coming out?" asked the French commander.

"It is here, sir," replied Cascella. "I am the garrison."

A HARMLESS GHOST

A stonemason in the days when men wore knee breeches and wigs one evening wished to add a few letters to an epitaph on a gravestone recently set up. He obtained permission and went with his tools and lantern to complete his task. The churchyard was cold and gloomy, and very soon he lit an extra candle to give more light.

Suddenly, as he stooped over the work, he heard a curious rustling noise—"Hush!" He lifted his head and looked around, but saw nothing. He fell to his work again, but no sooner was his head bowed over the stone than the same faint, mysterious "Hush!" was heard again. He could stand it no more, but got up and fled for his life and was not consoled till he was in bed and fast asleep.

The next morning he was sitting with his wife at breakfast when his wife said suddenly: "Peter, what is the matter with your wig? It is all burnt on one side!"

He gave a cry of joy, to his wife's surprise. The mystery was explained. The strange "Hush!" was nothing more than the sound of his hair frizzing as he bent over the candle.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

For the Children

King George's Only Daughter.

Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary is the full name of the little lady whose picture is shown above. She is the only daughter of King George V. of England and has just passed her thirteenth birthday. Princess Mary, as she is commonly called, is just a little girl, despite her high sounding title, and is being educated according to the simple rules that prevail in the English royal household. Her great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, believed that her children should be reared in strict simplicity, and this system has been followed in succeeding generations. Princess Mary has been taught, among other things, the value of thrift and is sometimes seen at the postoffice near the palace depositing savings on her own account.

LITTLE THINGS

In a small building which was once Peter the Great's workshop in Holland is the inscription, "Nothing Is Too Little For the Attention of a Great Man."

It is curious to note that many things which have turned out most useful for man owe their beginnings to some slight accident. For instance, the telescope we owe to some children of a spectacle maker placing two or more pairs of spectacles before each other and looking through them at the distant sky. Their idea was followed up by older men. Pendulum clocks were invented after Galileo stood observing the lamp in a church swinging to and fro. Gunpowder was discovered from the falling of a spark on some materials mixed in a mortar.

The great results of a steam engine may all be traced to the boy who sat watching the steam which came from the nose of a teakettle. Electricity was discovered by a person observing that a piece of rubbed glass attracted small bits of paper.

The art of printing took its origin from some rude impressions taken for the amusement of children from letters carved on the bark of a beech tree.

The laws of gravitation were discovered by the falling of an apple to the ground.

INTEREST IN ANCIENT DAYS

As a rule, the ancients frowned upon the idea of interest. They called it usury, and, except in the case of wardships and trusts, when the law insisted upon money being usefully invested they looked upon the man who lived by investments as a bad character and his trade as a disreputable one. Even Aristotle, a most advanced thinker in many respects, talked most energetically against usury, calling it a "barren thing, which could produce nothing without violating nature." It was not until the crusades that the money lender had any standing or respectability in Europe.—New York American.

TWISTED ANIMALS

When your friends assemble on the porch or on your front doorstep you can play games and so while away the hours. Provide them with pencils and then give each one a neatly written list of these words numbered. The game is to arrange the letters in each word so as to spell an animal. It is a "twisty" game and lots of fun.

1. Peash. 8. Aimoch. 2. Duzzop. 9. Grabe. 3. Roastslab. 10. Retirer. 4. Leaphen. 11. Part. 5. Finge. 12. Kacope. 6. Torte. 13. Sonsoup. 7. Rukaja. 14. Unnepig.

Untwisted the animals are sheep, pugdog, albatross, elephant, giraffe, otter, jaguar, chamois, badger, terrier, tapir, peacock, opossum, penguin.

TRACING COUNTERFEITS.

EXCITING EMPLOYMENT FOR SKILLED SECRET SERVICE MEN.

The tracing of counterfeit bills back to the persons responsible for their issuance is a curious and exciting employment. The experts assigned by the government to this work are among the most skillful members of the secret service. The protection of the currency depends in large measure upon their efficiency, and the pains they take are almost infinite. The following case is one illustrating the difficulties which the secret service people meet and overcome:

A bank clerk in Cleveland had detected a counterfeit twenty dollar bill in the deposit of a small retail grocer. An expert was sent for and undertook the case.

He found that the grocer had received the bill from a shoe dealer, who had it from a dentist, who had it from somebody else, and so on, until the secret service man finally traced the bad note to an invalid woman who had used it to pay her physician. When questioned this woman said that the money had been sent her by her brother, who lived in New Orleans.

The sleuth looked up the brother's antecedents and soon became convinced that he was the man wanted. The brother, however, soon proved to the satisfaction of the secret service man that his suspicions were unfounded. Indeed, it appeared that the man had been received by the New Orleans man in part payment for rent of a house he owned in Pittsburgh. While the sleuth was a bit disengaged, he couldn't give over the case when he had gone so far, so he took the next train for Pittsburgh.

The tenant of the house in Pittsburgh proved to be a traveling oculist who spent most of his time in the middle west. The secret service man had the good luck, however, to catch him just as he had returned from a trip, and the man at once recognized the bad bill as one that had been given him by a patient in Cleveland, the very point whence the sleuth started.

The patient was a boss carpenter. The secret service man got his address from the oculist and went right after the new crew. At this point he had a premonition that something was going to happen, and he wasn't disappointed.

The carpenter, an honest old fellow, said that he had received the bill from a certain Parker. The said Parker was the small grocer in whose bank deposit the counterfeit had turned up. The expert flew to the grocer's as quickly as a cab could take him and found it closed. He had left town.

Afterward it was shown beyond question that the grocer was the agent of an organized band of counterfeiters. His shop was a mere blind. That the bill which he gave the carpenter should get back into his own funds after traveling all over the continent was one of those miracles of chance for which there is no explanation.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A DEAN RAMSAY STORY

Dean Ramsay's memoirs contain an anecdote of an old woman of Starthope. Just before her death she solemnly instructed her grandnephew,

"Willy, I'm dead, and as ye'll be the charge o' a' I have, mind, now, that as much whisky is to be used at my funeral as there was at my baptism."

Willy, having no record of the quantity consumed at the baptism, decided to give every mourner as much as he wished, with the result that the funeral procession, having to traverse ten miles to the churchyard on a short November day, arrived only at nightfall. Then it was discovered that the mourners, halting at a wayside inn, had rested the coffin on a dike and left it there when they resumed their journey. The corpse was a day late in arriving at the grave.

SUNDAY TRAVELING

Old time acts of parliament in Great Britain aimed to stop Sunday traveling. In 1603, for example, two men were found guilty of the crime of walking from Bristol to Bath on a Sunday and were at once fined 20 shillings ($4.80) each. All business was at a standstill on a Sunday. Nothing was allowed to be sold except milk. For all the traders of England the milkman, and the milkman alone, was allowed to pursue his calling for the whole seven days of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Cashin left Friday on the return trip to their home at Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Miss Elsie Maunders, of Chicago, left for Waukesha last Saturday night after a short visit with relatives here.

Mrs. Leonard Rice has returned from a visit of three weeks with friends in Green Bay, Chicago and other points.

Dr. and Mrs. Moritz Krems will occupy the commodious residence of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Clark, at 718 Center avenue.

The big fair will be held at Chippewa Falls next week, from the 19th to 23d, when the Soo road will give round trip rate of $3.30 from this city.

Mrs. Wm. McIntyre went to Oshkosh last Monday for a few days' visit with relatives, and will also call upon friends at Fond du Lac before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Binder of Duluth spent the latter half of last week in this city, called here by the death and burial of his brother Frank. They returned north Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Lewis Sawyer has been at Wausau for the past few days, where she was called to assist in caring for her daughter in law, Mrs. Chas. G. Sawyer, who is suffering from blood poisoning.

The fire department was called to the residence of Mrs. John Kolz, 613 Michigan avenue, Saturday afternoon, by a fire that originated in the roof from a spark, but was put out with little or no damage.

Gen. Stockley, the Soo's chief train dispatcher at Abbotsford, was down to spend Sunday with his family on Clark street. It is expected that a majority of the Soo employees at Abbotsford will move to Stevens Point before December first.

Peter Rose, brakeman on one of the local freights running between this city and Abbotsford, laid off last week and spent the time visiting the Minnesota state fair. Mr. Rose recently took the examination for promotion to conductor and passed with a high standing.

W. F. Berndt, Sr., former proprietor of the Columbian House, just north of the Soo passenger depot, requests all who are indebted to him to call at his home, 326 Dixon street, or the amount with Parker Bros. at Mr. Berndt's former place of business.

Frank Sutton, who until recently was engaged in the hotel business at Rice Lake, spent part of last week at the old home in this city. Mr. Sutton returned to the western part of the state Monday morning, but expects to move his family here within a few weeks.

It is reported that a through passenger train will be put on the Duluth branch of the Soo road about October 1st, running between that city and Chicago. For the present it will come via Abbotsford, but as soon as the new cut off is completed between Owen and Spencer the train will go over the latter line.

There will be an afternoon service at St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church next Sunday, at an English sermon will be preached in the evening by the pastor, Rev. L. O. Richter. He spends part of that day at Buena Vista, and the services will be conducted by Rev. C. F. Kueger of Alma.

John Miller, who has been a resident of this city for a number of years, has recently returned to his old home in the city of Milwaukee. He has been a resident of Milwaukee for a number of years, and has recently returned to his old home in the city of Milwaukee. He has been a resident of Milwaukee for a number of years, and has recently returned to his old home in the city of Milwaukee.

Mrs. W. F. West and children, who are staying at the Hotel Alpen, are now with their son and daughter, Wm. West, at 1111 Main Street. They are here for their stay in the city of Missoula, which were absolutely terrible for men miles around and several scores of lives were lost. It is to be hoped they enjoyed the visit in that enterprising town.

Frank Barrows, son of Conductor Geo. L. Barrows, is now filling the position of transfer man for the National Express Co. at the Soo depot in this city. He comes from Hopper, who had been employed there for several years. There has also been a change in express agents on the Portage branch, R. A. Pendergrast taking the place formerly filled by Frank Baldwin.

Andrew Anderson, who is about to engage in the drug business at the South Side, has rented the store building owned by Dr. Hill at the corner of Church and Madison streets. This place was used for a drug store several years, first by W. F. Voigt, he being succeeded by Dr. Hill. New fixtures will be put in and the entire building repainted. Mr. Anderson will open up within a couple of weeks.

Mrs. John Schwartz and son Frank were at Campbellsport last week to attend the wedding of Mrs. Mary Forsyth, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Forsyth of Campbellsport, formerly of McDowell and August Mayer of Junction City. The bridal couple were attended by Frank Schwartz and Miss Bessie Forsyth, sister of the bride. Their new home will be at Junction City, where the groom owns a fine farm. The many friends take pleasure in offering sincere good wishes.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO NO MORE SALOONS HERE

Articles and Items of News that Appeared in the Columns of The Gazette, Quarter of a Century Ago Today.

Engineer Ed. Thiell, of the Central, became the happy paternal parent of his first child, a boy, on Sunday morning last.

Mrs. Gutzeb, of Milwaukee, has been a guest of her sister, Mrs. Frank Abb, for a few days, expecting to remain a couple of months.

Mrs. Christine Henning and Jas. R. Marshall were married by Rev. W. C. Schilling, pastor of the Lutheran church, on Friday evening, Sept. 14th.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Phalen, on the North Side, last Thursday, and a son arrived at the home of Tom Finnessy, on Strong's avenue, on Sunday morning.

A little five year old child of Patrick Sullivan, who lives on the North Side, was quite badly kicked by a horse running at large in the streets, yesterday afternoon. Two of the little fellow's teeth were knocked out and a deep gash cut in his cheek.

At the meeting of the board of education held last Thursday it was deemed advisable, owing to the crowded condition of the different departments in the First and Second wards, to at once build a small school building adjoining the High school on Clark street.

Excavating for the new Fourth ward school was commenced yesterday afternoon by Ule &amp; Pierce, who have the contract for the mason work upon the building, and it is expected that the structure will be completed by July 1, 1886. Olin &amp; Calvert will do the carpenter work.

The Walker block, at the corner of Main and N. Third streets, is now owned by H. D. McCullough. The lot is 60,100 feet and is occupied by two buildings. The corner one is a wooden structure and is used by L. C. Walker &amp; Co. as a grocery store, while the other is known as the Walker stone block. The first floor is occupied by the Chicago Clothing Co. and The Gazette is located up stairs.

Farming Leads the World.

One of the big, interesting features at this year's State Fair is "The Romance of the Reaper," largely told with beautifully colored views and motion pictures. It is a story of modern progress, for without improved farm machines we would be without present-day farms and scientific farming, and without these the great worlds of business, commerce, and art would not exist. The entertaining story has been called "An Agricultural Tour of the World," with Geo. Frederic Wheeler as guide. A hundred colored views and 5,000 feet of moving picture film are shown, and every person, no matter who or where, will enjoy the scenes both American and foreign. The entertainment has been prepared under the direction of the International Harvester Company of America.

A Farewell Dinner.

There was a happy gathering at Hotel Sellers, last Saturday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Leahy were last in this city at a three course dinner given to the employes of Wisconsin's Best laundry. Twenty were seated around the festive board, and the dinner was given as a farewell to the men who were to be in the laundry business, here associated, some of them during the entire four and one-half years that he had been connected with the place and from which he had retired. It was made a great affair, with an amateur orchestra, and the manager, Mr. D. J. Leahy, S. A. Martin, engineer at the laundry made the presentation which was a surprise to the recipient, and was accompanied by Mr. Leahy, as well as the committee expected to do under the trying circumstances.

Handed Down From the Past.

The fear of the dark has lasted after the reason for that fear has gone. Just as the dog begins to run round and round before he goes down to sleep has he been since the time when his ancestors were wolf dogs, used to turn round and round in the deep drifts of leaves in the forest to make warm, sheltered beds to sleep in. The habit has lasted long after the need for it is over, and on the smooth earth the dog still turns round and round.

OUR MARKETS

Graham and feed quotations are given as follows: Wm. Inday, 1000 ft. The Jackson Milling Co., white wheat flour, the price on insects, 1000 ft., etc., and E. M. Cope's price list, 1000 ft., etc., and farmers and buyers can depend on them.

License Refused Applicant for New Saloon on N. Second Street, as Limit Has Been Reached.

The regular monthly meeting of the common council for September was held last Wednesday evening with all incumbents present except Abb, Heffron and Scribner. Dr. von Neupert, Sr., addressed the meeting relative to the unsanitary condition of the sewer connections at St. Stephen's parochial school and recommended that this be regulated by running the connection either to Wisconsin street or Division street. Jas. B. Sullivan said that this sewer had given more or less trouble ever since it was put in and also recommended that a new sewer be run to connect either south or east. Upon motion of Ald. Schenk the board of public works were authorized to take action.

Residents of the Sixth ward wanted the street light at the corner of Church and Rice streets moved to a point about fifty feet south of the Soo crossing on Church street. This was signed by C. G. Forster and about twenty others, and upon motion of Ald. Cook was referred to the committee on lighting.

Freeholders of the city and town of Linwood, including J. P. Malick and others, who had previously petitioned to lay out a highway south of the city limits, recommended that a committee be appointed by the mayor to confer with the town officers. The mayor appointed as such committee Aldermen Schenk, Cook and Port.

J. J. Bokolt, J. A. Wozalla and other members of St. Peter's congregation asked that Fourth avenue be macadamized between N. Second and N. Third streets, running in front of the church, school and priest's residence property. Ald. Urowski moved that the board of public works make this improvement, the macadam to be from 12 to 14 feet wide. Ald. Cook suggested that macadam in front of the church should be much wider, running to the sidewalk, and made an amendment to that effect, which was carried by all voting in favor except Redfield and Sparks.

Joseph M. Kimball, a blind boy who is attending the state institution, asked for aid in the sum of $25 to $50 to assist him, and Ald. Redfield moved that an appropriation of $25 be made. Ald. Schenk questioned the city's right to make an appropriation of this kind, but the motion was carried by all voting in favor except Ald. Firkus.

A petition from W. F. Owen and other residents on Ellis street asked that a sewer be laid between Church and Reserve streets, and it was referred to the board of public works.

The monthly report of Comptroller Cunneen showed that $165.52 had been paid for aid to poor persons in the city for August. A pharmacists' license was granted to Kenneth Bakens, the new South Side druggist, and a motion was carried that a saloon license be granted to Clemens Pietrowski, subject to the approval of the city attorney.

The telephone company reported that five new boxes to complete the fire alarm system would be necessary, which the Vetter Manfg. Co. would furnish and paint at $2.75 each; these were ordered.

J. C. Corcoran addressed the council relative to putting in new street signs, which he said are now more necessary than ever before, as new people are coming here to locate and they will want to know the names of the streets. He had figured that 400 signs would be necessary if one is placed at each street intersection, but the number might be cut down to about 400. These he would furnish at 50 cents each. Upon motion of Ald. Redfield, this matter was referred to the street committee with power to act, they to secure signs at the best possible price.

Upon motion of Ald. Redfield, the committee on fire department was empowered to order a test if necessary when the state commissioners visit this city.

Upon motion of Ald. Cook the board of public works were authorized to advertise for bids for piping for making sewer connections with the Fifth ward school and St. Joseph's parochial school. The committee on city buildings were authorized to make necessary repairs on engine houses and other houses owned by the city.

Ald. Schenk reported that it is his opinion that the new street signs should be placed at the intersection of N. Third and W. Main streets, and he moved that a vote of thanks be given to him for his services.

A committee composed of A. J. Dr. J. L. Altenburg and S. A. Martin, author of the original street signs, recommended that the new signs be placed at the intersection of N. Third and W. Main streets, and a vote of thanks be given to them for their services.

High School Notes.

Miss Dorothy Wing of Chicago visited some of the classes Monday afternoon.

Stevens Point High school foot ball team plays Waupaca Saturday at Waupaca.

The new fire escape has just been put up. With a few fire drills we ought to have no fear of a catastrophe.

The coming of the division is already felt at the old High, for several pupils from out of town have enrolled.

We have a great many more students this year than last. We have quantity, that's certain, and quality will come under the guidance of our efficient corps of teachers.

Clarence Wilson of Plainfield and Lucia Ballou recently of Abbotsford have joined the Senior class, and Hazel Cross of Wild Rose, Ida Stockley and Rose Tardiff of Abbotsford, and Katherine MacGillis of Milwaukee, have enrolled as Juniors this year.

At a meeting of the Athletic Association last week the following officers were elected: President, Byron Carpenter; vice pres., Fred Knote, secretary, George Dumas; treasurer, Harvey Rogers, serg.-at-arms, Gladstone O'Keefe; property man, Bernard Dobeck. The association has already purchased six new foot ball suits.

Among the other new students from out of town are Mable Altenburg of Plover, Sarah Conen of Plainfield, Alice Morrissey of Whiting, Florian Bannach of Custer, Orval Newby of Plover, Sidney Fuller of Elgin, Ill., Gertrude Stockley of Abbotsford, Irving Marsh of Wausau, Helen Empey of Milladore, and Vieta Newby of Plover.

The room capacity of the High school has been greatly enlarged by dividing the gymnasium, on the third floor, into seven rooms besides a large hallway. The domestic science department occupies two of these rooms, one of which is used for cooking and the other for serving. The commercial classes, under the supervision of Miss Clara Means, have a large recitation room and a small room for typewriting. The other three rooms are occupied by the classes of Miss Smith, the English teacher, and Miss Hazel Rice the drawing teacher. The lighting of most of the rooms is materially increased by skylights.

The School Attendance.

Last week the attendance in our public schools was given by wards, a total of 995, which shows a marked decrease in all the schools except the High and First ward schools, compared with last year. This is due to a great extent to the fact that no tuition is now charged at the Normal in the primary grades. On the other hand the attendance in the parochial schools has increased about as much as it has fallen off in the public schools. The attendance in these schools is as follows: St. Peter's, 502; St. Stephen's, 150; St. Joseph's, 90.

An Attorney Wanted.

The State Civil Service Commission will offer a general competitive examination on October 8, 1910, for the following positions: First assistant attorney general, second assistant attorney general, and third assistant attorney general. A vacancy now exists in the position of second assistant attorney general. Salary $2,500 per year. Persons interested are requested to write to the State Civil Service Commission at Madison for information and blanks.

Last week's vote in the primary, wherein there were "big Republican gains" in various wards and towns in the county, is no indication of the vote that will be cast in November. The voters last week were voting for an "object," a "principle" or an "individual" in November they will get back into line as Democrats, voting for Democratic candidates, even more than in years past.

There is every indication that many Democrats who deserted the ship last week voted for Frank T. Tucker, the Republican candidate for attorney general, who committed suicide a few days before the primary, as the majority of votes were cast in behalf of his name. Some may say that other Democrats, those who stood by the ticket, also voted for "dead ones," where they failed to get the required 20 per cent, but it is believed the supreme court in its wisdom will regulate the latter deformity, declaring it unconstitutional, as will the properly authorized committee substitute a live name in the place of the late Mr. Tucker.

Wood and Land.

The last chance to get wood to burn in your home. I have for sale cheap land covered with pulp and other wood, located near this city. It will be sold in small pieces and long time given on payment. Enquire of J. P. Malick, if you like to buy.

Be Sure and Look.

Watch our window this fall if you want to buy paper at cost price. Vic tor S. Paine, 509 Main street.

Very Bad Cough.

Po-ru-na stopped it.

DAUGHTER OF MRS. J. M. BROWN.

Mrs. J. M. Brown, Dunnegan, Mo., writes: "My little daughter, three years old, was troubled with a very bad cough which remained after an attack of infantile fever, which was a great one. It was worse at night.

She would wake up out of her sleep and cough until I feared she could not

Misses Catherine and Nellie Timlin have purchased the residence property at the corner of Briggs and Phillips streets from Anna and Louise Johnson, the consideration being $1,200.

E. M. Copps & Co. wish to buy a horse weighing about 1,100 pounds. The owner of such animal is requested to call on or write the firm in this city, stating size of animal, color and price.

The first heavy frost of the season visited this section last Friday night, and while growing corn and other vegetation in low places showed the effects next day, the damage resulting was slight.

Chas. Clark, bookkeeper for the John Week Lumber Co., was off duty most of last week and for a few days was quite sick with intestinal trouble. During his brief illness he lost nearly 20 pounds in weight.

Miss Winnifred Shamway, who had been spending the summer vacation at her home in this city, left for Houston, Texas, yesterday, to resume her work for the third year as supervisor of music in the public schools.

Kellogg Bahner, who was called here during the previous week by the serious illness of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ralph Harvey, returned to his home at Brainerd, Minn., last Friday morning. Mrs. Bahner and daughter, Margaret, will remain here for several weeks at least.

Chas. Poblocki, charged with abandoning his wife and children several months ago, was held for trial in circuit court by Justice Park, last Saturday, and in default of $500 bail was sent to jail. Poblocki had been employed by different horse dealers for the past few years.

Miss Gladys Park left today for Colby to visit for a few days previous to taking up her school work at Park Falls next Monday. Miss Park entertained a number of young lady friends at her home last Friday afternoon, and on Monday she was the guest of honor at a party given by Miss Ada Moen.

Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Brathoude, of Reynolds, N. D., have been guests at the home of his sister, Mrs. Arthur Van Orden, north of Jordan, for the past few days, and will visit among relatives in the eastern part of the county before their departure. They are former residents of Sharon, moving to the west 33 years ago.

Don C. Hall, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator in the recent primaries, is on the road again with his company, starting out immediately after election. He writes that he will again be a candidate for the same office in 1914, when those who are here at that time may expect to listen to his oratory and arguments.

New home made sauerkraut, 10 cents per quart at Langenberg's. Tel. 82.

Mrs. W. B. Buckingham has returned from a visit of a couple of weeks at Boeckel.

Mrs. J. M. Bischoff is spending a couple of weeks visiting with her mother in Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Port are attending the state fair and visiting Milwaukee relatives and friends this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Tardiff and baby spent the latter half of last week at Neillsville, visiting the lady's old home.

Miss Mable Olsen left here Friday morning for St. Paul, where she will again teach domestic science in the city schools.

Mrs. Jas. Sullivan and baby are here from Ironwood, Mich., to visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hein.

Mrs. Geo. W. Utter, of Fond du Lac, was in Stevens Point this week, a guest of Miss Minnebeck, Mrs. O. Holmes and other friends.

Mrs. Andrew Wood, who had been spending a week at the home of her mother, Mrs. P. Collins, returned to St. Paul yesterday.

B. B. Park and Frank Sharpstein are spending a few days fishing at Lady Smith, going up on Monday with W. E. Ulz in the latter's auto.

Gaylord Macnich will remove from his present residence on Main street to one of the residences owned by Mrs. Kuhl on Normal avenue, tomorrow.

Frank Cormack, who had been visiting at his home in this city for several days, left for Two Rivers, the first of the week, to accept a position in a drug store.

Lyman Copps, Alfred Baker and Clarence Coyle left for Carroll College, Waukesha, Monday, the latter two to take up their first year's work in that institution.

Mel. Walker and C. O. Luce, prominent merchants at Plainfield, spent several hours in town Tuesday morning while returning home from a business trip to Chicago.

Miss Anna Clark entertained a party of young lady friends, married and single, at bridge, last Saturday afternoon, and the prize was awarded to Mrs. Moritz Krems.

Mrs. Jas. Welch and niece, Miss Frances Fallon, left for Beaver Dam, yesterday, where they will attend the marriage of their nephew and brother, Martin Fallon of Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Heffron, Mrs. J. D. McHugh and Mrs. Graves, the latter of Brownsdale, Minn., went to Montello by auto Tuesday morning to visit a few days with relatives.

Mrs. H. M. Montgomery and two little daughters, who had been visiting a few weeks with her parents, Melvin Searles and wife, on Division street, returned to Altoona Tuesday morning.

John D. Collins, who now fills the position of bookkeeper for the lighting company at Bartlesville, Okla., arrived here last Monday morning for a couple of weeks' visit with his mother and sisters on S. Third street.

Mrs. H. M. Wedleight and son, Matt, left for Milwaukee Tuesday morning where the lady will visit a sister, Mrs. J. H. Radke, for several days. Matt will continue on to Chicago and again take up his work in pharmacy.

W. S. Powell and family now occupy the J. D. McHugh house at 718 Clark street, moving last week from their former home at the corner of Normal and Smith street. Mr. Powell is local manager for the telephone company.

Nicholas Knop of 512 Reserve street, who for several years had been employed at the Cove furniture factory, resigned his position last week and left here Sunday afternoon for Milwaukee, where he expects to get work in a machine shop.

Ed. Flanagan, who has many friends in this city and throughout the county, will be the next sheriff of Waupaca county, having won out in the Republican primaries last week by a vote of 3,189. There were three candidates in the field, the next highest receiving 1,588 votes.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Krems, Sr., and Alex. Krems, Jr., left for Milwaukee, Monday afternoon, the first named gentleman to enter Sacred Heart Sanitarium for treatment. Mr. Krems was recently ill with pneumonia for a couple of weeks, and since then had one or more serious temporary attacks.

Jas. A. Brenner returned last week from Fond du Lac, where he had been a patient at St. Agnes' Hospital for nearly two months. It will be remembered that while enroute to his ranch in Nebraska, Mr. Brenner fell from the door of a box car at Fond du Lac and broke his leg. He is now able to get about somewhat with the aid of crutches.

John Winiecki, a well known plasterer living at 317 Union street, was down from Colby over Sunday, where he has been employed for several weeks. He had the job of plastering a large church and is also doing the work in the school building being erected by W. H. Allen. John will plaster new churches at Spencer and Winona this fall.

About twenty lady friends of Mrs. E. L. Brennan, of Lee, Mass., tendered her a farewell surprise at the home of her sister, Mrs. M. Cassidy, on Strong's avenue, Monday evening. The ladies arrived in a body, laden with good things to eat, and after receiving a hearty welcome, passed several hours at bridge whist. Mrs. Brennan departed from the city the next morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Nelson and baby son left for Eau Claire, Monday evening, to visit at the home of Mrs. Nelson's parents, and expect to spend few days before returning with her brother in Minneapolis, intending to be gone about two weeks. In the meantime Chas. Price, who has been spending the summer at Oconomowoc, is assisting in the Nelson hardware shop on Third street.

Mrs. Jennie Beattie was down from Abbotsford a few days last week, coming to meet her daughter, Miss Ruth, who returned Wednesday night from Michigan, where she spent the summer among relatives. The young lady is again enrolled at the Normal school and she and a couple of other students occupy the Beattie home at 930 Normal avenue. Just before returning here Ruth attended the funeral of her paternal grandmother, who died on Monday of last week.

Miss Florence Ross is teaching at Withee, leaving for that place on Sunday.

John F. Shea was able to be out last Sunday, after being confined to his home on the North Side for several days, due to a shock, it is supposed, which he received from being nearly run over by a train near the stone quarry. Yesterday he suffered a relapse and was unable to sleep last night. Today, however, he is somewhat improved and it is hoped that he will soon have entirely recovered.

Geo. P. McAdam, superintendent of dining car service on the Soo company's Chicago division, died at his home in Chicago last Sunday, following a two weeks' illness. Mr. McAdam had not been in robust health for a long time, but continued his duties until recently. He was 56 years of age. The gentleman had been with the Wisconsin Central and Soo companies for many years and very efficiently handled his branch of the service. He made frequent visits to Stevens Point, where he had numerous personal friends.

Mrs. Florence Kollock is the guest of Wausau friends this week.

Miss Van Stratum of Abbotsford was a guest at the home of Geo. Stockley on Clark street, Tuesday.

Charlie Britz has returned from a ten days' visit at the home of his uncle, Henry Lauer, in St. Paul.

Jim Burns has arrived here from Grand Forks, N. D., for a visit at his home on Normal avenue.

Miss Alice Rogers will leave for Park Falls, next Saturday, to resume her work as teacher in the schools.

Mr. Chas. Cartmill and son, Harry, spent last week visiting at the home of his brother, T. L. Martin, at Wausau.

Course you have. Everyone has. And you've always ended by saying: "I'll start to save sure next week."

Next week comes; what do you do? Maybe it's a pleasure trip; maybe some knick-knack that takes your fancy. You spend the money. Our good resolution is broken. The pleasure is over; then again comes the time.

By saving is not meant denying one's self the comforts of life. But it does mean denying ourselves trivial things that crowd us on all sides.

Take out a certain amount of your salary weekly. Bring it to us. We'll guard it for you; we'll help you save. Then you're on the right track.

You can start a savings account at this strong bank with One Dollar. We pay three per cent. on Savings and Certificates. You intend to save START NOW. All business confidential.

WE ASK YOU EVER HAD THE BLUES?

Ever sit down and think what you're going to do when you get older, and not so able to work? Ever think of the money you might have had, if you had only been a little saving?

Course you have. Everyone has. And you've always ended by saying: "I'll start to save sure next week."

DANCY.

Miss Gladys Altenburg is at Wausau, a student at the business college.

J. A. Harman of Peoria, Ill., was in Dancy a day the past week on business.

The rains of the past few days have done much good for pastures and fall plowing.

School resumed Monday with Miss Bessie Lightfoot of Fairchild as teacher.

Mrs. J. Coniff is spending the week at Kronenwetter with her daughter, Mrs. Henry Kronenwetter.

A great many from here attended the county fair at Wausau the past week and were well pleased.

Chas. Forrestal of Milwaukee was in Dancy Saturday getting a crew of men to dismantle the big dredge boat, preparatory to moving it to Sioux City, Iowa.

G. D. Jones, J. N. Manson and H. C. Stewart of Wausau were Dancy callers last Saturday and in company with G. K. Knoller went out to see the results of the ditching in the Dancy district. They made the trip in Mr. Stewart's Pierce Arrow touring car.

Mrs. Lottie Hanson, widow of the late Hans B. Hanson, mention of whose death was made in last week's Gazette, wishes to kindly thank the many friends and neighbors and also the Knights of Maccabees for the assistance they rendered her during the illness and after the death of her beloved husband.

Mrs. G. G. Knoller and sons George and Norman were Milwaukee visitors the past week, George going down to enter Marquette university for the coming year. He has very capably managed his father's mercantile business at this place for the past couple of years and goes to Marquette to brush up along business lines.

While in Milwaukee they had the pleasure of hearing ex-Pres. Roosevelt deliver his speech to an audience of several thousand in the auditorium. Col. Roosevelt is a slow, deliberate speaker and every word could be easily understood. He seemed to wish to impress upon his audience more emphatically than anything else the fact that it took three requisites to make a man—honesty, courage and common sense—and the only way any one could accomplish anything was by not being afraid. It was estimated that fully 10,000 people were present in the great building in which he spoke, and the writer, who luckily occupied a seat in the balcony overlooking the vast assemblage, never again expects to witness so much enthusiasm and hear such thunderous applause.

AMBERST.

Mrs. Chas. Manbeck returned from Michigan last Friday.

Robert Nystrum of Medford visited friends here Monday.

John Een is spending a few days in Milwaukee this week.

Mrs. Ruth Dauber of Oshkosh is a guest at L. A. Pomeroy's.

Frank Allen of Dayton, Waupaca county, was in town Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Powers of Waterford, Racine county, are visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wollenschlager of Chicago were guests at Martin Knutson's last week.

Mrs. Mattie Shilling of South Milwaukee is visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. Amelia Miller.

Elisha Moss recently sold his farm to Glen Starr of Berlin. Mr. Moss will move to the village of Amherst.

A crew of men commenced work Monday on the concrete bridges on the Soo line over Wilson and Lincoln streets.

Alex Konkel had a valuable horse killed by lightning on his farm in the town of Buena Vista Sunday evening.

Lightning struck Chas. Bickle's house near Amherst Junction, Sunday evening. Not much damage was done.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Wilson were Sunday visitors at Robert Blair's, Sheridan.

Dr. Metcalf has taken possession of the dental rooms recently owned by Dr. W. H. Wilson, who has returned to Stevens Point.

Mrs. H. H. Harvey of Sefner, Fla., is in Chicago, where she is having a skin cancer removed from her face by ex-ray treatment.

O. K. Olson's barn and contents were destroyed by fire during the electric storm Sunday evening. Insured in the New Hope Mutual for $300.

Jim Hardina made a business trip to Stevens Point Monday.

Miss Martha Prausa spent Sunday with friends at Stevens Point.

A. J. Empey was a business caller at Stevens Point last Thursday.

Miss Anna Ressel spent a couple of days at Marshfield last week.

Mrs. Frank Zivney was a Stevens Point shopper last Wednesday.

Miss Lillian Komera of Stevens Point spent Sunday with her parents.

Harry Smith of Chippewa Falls spent Sunday with his best girl here.

Mrs. Jacob Verhulst went to Milwaukee Tuesday to attend state fair.

Miss Lillian Jellison of Eau Claire is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Everts.

Miss Maggie Anderson is spending a few days with friends at Grand Rapids.

Miss Phillipa Holbe of Junction City visited friends here between trains Monday.

Mrs. Ben Manning and children of Marathon City are guests at the A. J. Empey home.

Fred Hazleton went to Chippewa Falls last Wednesday, where he hopes to get employment.

Miss Lillian Empey left for Gillett, Thursday, to take up her work of teaching school in that village.

Mrs. Dent, who had been visiting her parents here the past week, returned to her home at Manawa Tuesday.

Mrs. Chas. Everts and niece, Florence Jellison, went to Milwaukee Monday to attend state fair and visit relatives.

The chicken pie supper given by the Ladies' Aid at the home of Mrs. Thorp last Wednesday was well attended and all present did justice to the delicious chicken pie.

R. S. Unland returned from Delavan last week to resume his work at Pine Knoll. He was accompanied by his friend, Whitney Raymond. Mr. Unland has had a fine team of horses shipped here and expects to scour the country in great style this winter.

PLAINFIELD.

L. W. Chapman of Montello is spending the week in town.

Stanley Starkey is spending the week in Chicago visiting his two sisters.

Roy Welton of Minneapolis is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Welton.

Mrs. Viola Pass and son, Alfred Rose of Milwaukee, are visiting at N. P. Rozell's.

J. N. Wiggington, landlord at Hotel Mitchell, was a Fond du Lac business visitor Friday.

Mrs. Nelson, formerly Nora Moldenhauer, accompanied by her husband, visited the lady's foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Moldenhauer, between trains Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are residents of Waupaca.

The Long Spoon.

"Tomkyns" recently heard the expression "If you sup with the devil you will need a long spoon." "Though I never heard it before," he says, "it is evidently fairly well known, and what I should like to know is, What does it mean, and where does it come from?"

It means that if you are going to sit down to a meal with his Satanic majesty you will need a long spoon to avoid the necessity of getting too near the old gentleman and, in its general sense, of course, it implies that if you have dealings with a dangerous or notorious person it behoves you to use great caution. It comes from one of the "Ingoldsby Legends," and the quotation reads:

Who supps with the Devil should have a long spoon.

A Queer Diagnosis.

A celebrated Dublin physician was Sir Dominic Corrigan, who was as much famed for his brusqueness toward patients as for his skill. In the course of some reminiscences William Charles Scully told a story of the doctor which is quite well worth quoting.

"I was taken to see him," says the writer, "several times, but he always treated me with the utmost kindness.

However, a highly respectable maiden aunt of mine had a different experience. She went to consult him. After sounding her—none too gently—and asking a few questions he gave a grunt and relapsed into silence. Then after a short pause of meditation he said, 'Well, ma'am, it's one of two things—either you drink or else you sit with your back to the fire.'

ONE TOO MANY TEACHERS

The Force of Public School Teachers in the Fourth Will Be Reduced—

Other School Matters.

Dr. E. M. Rogers was the only member of the board of education who was absent from the meeting held Monday evening. A letter from Supt. Cary stated that the report of the High school was satisfactory, but in order to get full state aid it would be necessary to introduce manual training into the grades from the sixth up, as well as in the High school proper, where it is now being taught. The report was placed on file.

The committee on teachers recommended that Miss Winifred Nelson be engaged as a fifth grade teacher at a salary of $45 per month and that Martin Augustad be re-engaged as janitor on the West Side at a salary of $20 per month. Upon motion the report in so far as the janitor is concerned was accepted, but no further action taken.

Mr. Hammond, teacher of manual training, reported that a number of new tools are necessary in his department and that several of the work benches would have to be replaced or new tops placed thereon. The tops, including new vises, would cost about $9.50 each, while to secure new benches and vises the cost would be about $15.50 each. It is also necessary to secure some additional tools in the drawing department. Those now on hand are in excellent condition. This matter was left to the supply committee with power to act.

Mr. Cook reported that $90.80 had been expended for supplies in the domestic science department. He also spoke of the contemplated improvement on the Sixth ward school grounds and recommended that the work be done by the day. The expense, he thought, would be about $25 more than the estimated amount, which was about $100. He said that he could not secure teams less than $4.50 per day and laboring men wanted $1.75 per day. It was also reported that Mr. Wing, the Chicago architect who drew the plans for the changes at the High school, had examined the work and found it satisfactory.

Mr. Anderson reported that the deaf department had been moved to the east

The Passion Players at Oberammergau

The Scene on Calvary

AMOST fascinating place is Oberammergau. One calls it a village because it is impossible to think of it as a town, in spite of its 1,650 inhabitants. It seems to be built anyhow. The houses are white, with deep-browed red roofs. Many of them are gaily painted, not only as to their woodwork and with quaint devices around the windows and doors, but with pictures, sacred and profane, and one of them has the whole of its wall space decorated in this way with frescoes done a hundred years ago by a great master in the art. The tortuous streets are full of little shops and some big ones, in most of which carvings are displayed for sale, and in this festival year there are temporary booths besides, for the sale of post cards or other things that the modern traveler has need of. The rocky mountains, clothed with dark pines and still in part snow-covered, rise on either side, and on the summit of the highest peak is an enormous wooden cross so far above you that it looks as if it were made of matchwood.

As you walk about the streets and the country roads almost every one you meet bails you with "Gruß Gott!" and the men and boys raise their green, feather hats. They are the most courteous and gentle-mannered people I have ever met, and I think the most truly religious. You soon get used to the long hair of the men, even when you see it on the road sweepers. The true Oberammergauer never cuts his hair.

Players in Daily Life.

It is worth while staying in Oberammergau for a day or two before or after a performance, if only to see the players going about their daily work. You recognize a girl who serves you in a shop—a smiling German Fraulein with her fair hair neatly plaited—as one of the sweet singers in the choir of "Guardian Angels," when she wore a robe of gold and purple over her white, girdled garment, and her hair fell from beneath her crown to below her waist. An urchin paddling in the mud outside the schoolhouse stood with arms outstretched for full two minutes in one of the tableaux and never stirred. At the blacksmith's forge a man with a noble, classical face and gray hair and beard is shoeing a horse. Yesterday he was for the third time leader of the chorus, a kingly figure in gold crown and scarlet robe, with a fine voice and a splendid dignity of bearing. Everywhere you meet familiar faces, for during the long hours of the performance they have stamped themselves in your memory.

I was taken to the house of Johann Zwink, and we were shown into a brightly-painted room with an old porcelain stove in the corner. A sweet-faced young girl talked with us for a little and then said she would go and fetch her father. She was Ottile Zwink, who takes the part of Mary, the Mother of Jesus. She is not yet twenty, but she is already spoken of as one of the best representatives of her difficult part that the play has ever had. She is the Mater Dolorosa, her voice full of piercing sorrow and her eyes of tears.

Presently her father came in, a gray-haired man with a kindly, somewhat pathetic face. He is a house painter, and he apologizes for the state of his working clothes. He has gone through many troubles, and only recently lost his eldest son, who had been a hopeless invalid for ten years. He had been Isaac in the tableau of 1900, and it is said that he contracted the rheumatic fever from which he died by sleeping on damp hay, when all the beds in his father's house were given up to the visitors.

A Wonderful Performance.

As a young man, Johann Zwink twice played the part of the Apostle John. This year, for the third time, he is taking the part of Judas. His is a wonderful performance. He comes in first with the other disciples who surround their master in his triumphal entry into Jerusalem. You would hardly notice him. He is one of the group. But in the house of Simon, when the Magdalene anoints the head and feet of Christ, he begins to make his mark. He stares in a puzzled, startled way at the waste, and grumbles at it. But there is no wickedness apparent in him yet. He is the treasurer of the little society, anxious for the morrow.

When he next appears, on the road to Jerusalem, he seems a little detached from the rest; his faith in the future is weakened. "But, Master," he says. "If thou art really about to leave us, make some provision for us. See here, there is not enough for one day more;" and when he is left alone he makes up his mind to withdraw, tired of hoping for glories to come. The dispossessed traders come upon him in this mood and persuade him to tell where his master is to be found, and so reap the reward offered by the Sanhedrin. "That is no betrayal," he says to himself, when they have left him.

Then we see him at the last supper, sitting wrapped in his suspicious thoughts, his back half-turned to the rest. Unwillingly, almost snatching at them, he receives the bread and the wine, and then the sop, after which he goes out quickly. When he appears before the Sanhedrin to claim his reward the good Nicodemus rebukes him with hot indignation. He stands trembling, but the silver pieces brought in tempt him again, and he tests them in a greedy, miserly way. His traitor's kiss, when standing on tiptoe, his whole attitude tense and fearful, he reaches over Christ's shoulder and greets him with his "Hail, Master!" is one of the thrilling moments of the play, and can never be forgotten. Afterward we see him stricken with horror on being told that the master he has betrayed is to die, his quick remorse, his throwing down the bag of money before the priests and rabbis, his lonely bitterness of despair, and the dreadful scene of his preparing to hang himself in a lonely wood.

It was difficult to believe that this gentle sad-faced man, sitting by the stove in his splashed clothes, was the man who had been the living, breathing object of the whole world's execration the day before.

FALLING ROCKS KILL

TEN WORKMEN ARE DEAD, NINE
INJURED IN ERIE RAILROAD TUNNELS.

SOMEONE MADE A BLUNDER

Twenty-Eight Laborers Are Caught in Tubes Underneath Hundreds of Tons of Brick and Mortar—Nine Escape Uninjured.

Jersey City, N. J.—By the fall of hundred tons of Palisade rock through the broken roof of the old Erie railroad tunnels ten workmen were crushed to death Sunday and nine others were seriously injured, five of them probably fatally.

The dead and injured formed part of a gang of twenty-eight hard rock men who were removing the mountain of stone above the tunnels to transform them into open "cuts" as was recently completed on other tracks adjacent. Somebody either blundered in blasting which weakened the brick roof of the tubes, or there was an unsuspected fault in the rock.

The police and Prosecutor Garvan are very anxious to find A. L. Moorshead, the Erie's resident engineer in charge, and James Smith, superintendent of the tunnel work. Already Mr. Garvan has ordered an inquiry.

The Erie tunnels were driven through the solid rock of the Palisades about fifteen years ago and rounded with five courses of heavy brick-mortared. Two months ago after three years' hard work, the Willard Construction company considered the opening of the passenger tunnels now known as the Perzen cut.

The company itself concluded to open the freight tracks on its own account and placed its own engineers and workmen in charge.

West of the Hudson boulevard viaduct there was a mass of rock to cut away about 110 feet deep down to the brick walls of the tunnels and about 125 feet long. Working in three shifts of eight hours each, the gangs had cut down to the tunnel for a distance of more than 60 feet and they had removed all the upper work to within 30 feet of the brick below.

Twenty-eight men were employed in cleaning up the debris left by the drilling and blasting when there came first a crashing report, then a swaying and tossing of a solid rock. A thunderous report like a park of artillery and after that there was a churning and tossing of men as first the center sank and piecemeal great chunks of rock, some weighing tons, fell from the sides, grinding and crushing as they struck.

COL. I. L. ELLWOOD IS DEAD

Richest Man in Illinois Succumbs to Illness of Paralytic Nature of Two Months' Duration.

Chicago—Col. Isaac L. Ellwood, one of the most prominent figures in the life of Illinois since the early '70s and the richest man in Illinois, died Sunday night at his residence in De Kalb, Ill., after an illness of more than two months.

Since the death of his wife nine weeks ago Colonel Ellwood had been sinking rapidly and physicians at no time have even hoped for his recovery. The illness from which he was suffering was of a paralytic nature and attacked him a few days after the funeral of Mrs. Ellwood.

Colonel Ellwood was a pioneer manufacturer of barbed wire fencing, and to the expansion of that industry with the subdivision of the great ranches of the west into farms, he owes his fortune. Aside from his wealth and his industrial activity, Colonel Ellwood became one of the best known men in the state through his political and financial affiliations.

LCRIMER RESIGNS FROM CLUB

Senator Urges Hamiltonians to Accept
Withdrawal at Once—Friends
May Refuse to Comply.

Chicago—A terse note of resignation from the Hamilton club of which he had been a member many years, was the answer made here Saturday by United States Senator William Lorimer to the action of the club president, John R. Batten, in withdrawing his invitation to the Roegel banquet.

The invitation was withdrawn at the demand of Colonel Roosevelt, who refused absolutely to attend a banquet at which Senator Lorimer was also a guest.

While Senator Lorimer urged that his resignation be accepted immediately, it is said that the senators probably will refuse to vote the action.

WISCONSIN BREVITIES

Superior.—The faithfulness of a spaniel dog was the means of saving the lives of a mother, Mrs. A. W. Gorski, and her three small children, the oldest of whom is about six years, from being burned alive as they lay sleeping in their beds. The animal rushed into the room, jumped upon the mother's bed and began pawing at her face. She pushed him aside, but again he climbed upon the bed and, barking and pawing, tried to warn her of the danger. After some minutes, Mrs. Gorski awoke and almost as she did so flames swept within sight. Grabbing the children she, with the faithful beast at her side, rushed from the building, which was soon reduced to ashes.

Madison.—The board of examiners consisting of Secretary of State Frear, State Treasurer Dahl and Attorney General Gilbert, will meet September 13 to canvass the vote. This board, while enjoined to do its work expeditiously as possible, may adjourn for ten days. As the platform committee is to meet the Monday following, September 26, it is possible that the filling of the vacancy for attorney general on the official Republican ticket, should such be found to exist, may go over to the new state central committee. The general belief here is that the board of examiners will take advantage of the law giving authority to adjourn for not to exceed ten days.

Marinette.—"Tis thy wedding morn," sang Walter Allan Stultz, bass, to Edith Moya Graham, noted Chicago soprano, in a production of the cantata, "Rose Maiden," here last June. Next June Stultz can sing the same.

Appleton.—In a signed statement George Harp, a cripple, confessed that he broke a bottle of carbolic acid from the horse barn of the Smith Livery company and poured the contents, nearly a half pint, into the coffee in the dinner bucket belonging to Daniel Wing. He thought Wing had caused his discharge and said although he did not know the poison would kill his victim, he placed it in the coffee to make him sick.

Appleton.—Carbolic acid and coffee might have proven fatal to Daniel Wing, night boster for the Smith Livery and Transfer company. When Wing started to eat his midnight lunch, he took a sip of coffee and then spit it out as the carbolic acid was so strong it burned his mouth. It was found the large bottle of acid used about the horses was missing and the police are looking for a discharged employee of the barn who is suspected of having placed half a pint of acid

SYNOPSIS.

At a private view of the Chatworth personal estate, to be sold at auction, the Chatworth ring mysteriously disappears. Harry Cressy, who was present, describes the ring to his fiancee, Flora Gilsey, and her chaperon, Miss Shima. Harry, as being like a sun-god, with a beautiful amethyst set in the head. Flora discovers an unfamiliar mood in Harry, especially when the ring is discussed. She attends "Indies' night" at the club and meets Mr. Kerr, an Englishman, who reveals that the missing ring has been known to the Cressys. The disappearance recalls the exploits of Farrell Ward, an English thief. Flora has a fancy that Harry and Kerr are concerned in the mystery.

CHAPTER IV.

Flowers by the Way.

Flora liked this funny little dining room with walls as frail as box-boards, low-ceiled and flooded with sun. It recalled surroundings she had known later than the mining camp, but long before the great red house. It seemed to her that she fitted here better than the Purdies. She looked across at Kerr, sitting opposite, to see if perhaps he fitted too. But he was foreign, decidedly. He kept about him still the hint of delicate masquerade that she had noticed the night before. Out of doors, alone with her, he had lost it. For a moment he had been absolutely off his guard.

She rose from the table with the feeling that in an hour all three of them had become quite old friends of his, though without knowing anything further about him.

"We must do this again," Mrs. Purdie said, as they parted from her in the garden.

"Surely we will," Kerr answered her.

But Flora had the feeling that they never, never would. For him it had been a chance touching on a strange shore.

But at least they were going away together. They would walk together as far as the little car, whose terminal was the edge of the parade-ground. But just outside of the gate he stopped.

"Do you especially like board walks?" he asked.

It was an instant before she took his meaning. Then she laughed. "No. I like green paths."

He waved with his cane. "There is a path yonder, that goes over a bridge, and beyond that a hill."

"And at the top of that another car," Flora reminded him.

"Ah, well," he said, "there are flowers on the way, at least." He looked at her whimsically. "There are three purple irises under the bridge. I noticed them as I came down."

She was pleased that he had noticed that for himself—pleased, too, that he had suggested the longer way.

The narrow path that they had chosen branched out upon the main path, broad and yellow, which dipped downward into the hollow. From there came the murmur of water. Green showed through the white grass of last summer. Sauntering between plantations of young eucalyptus, they came to the arched stone bridge. They leaned on the parapet, looking down at the marshy stream beneath and at the three irises Kerr had remarked, knee-deep in swamp ground.

"Now that I see them I suppose I want them," Flora remarked.

"Of course," he assented. "Then hold all these."

He put into her hands the loose bunch of syringa and rose plucked for her in the Purdies' garden, laid his hat and gloves on the parapet; then, with an eye for the better bank, walked to the end of the bridge.

She watched him descending the steep bank and issuing into the broad shallow basin of the stream's way. The sun was still high enough to fill the hollows with warm light and melior the doubles of trees and grass in the stream. In this landscape of green and pale gold he looked black and tall and angular. The wind blew longish locks of hair across his forehead, and she had a moment's pleased and timorous reflection that he looked like Satan coming into the Garden.

He advanced from tussock to tussock. He came to the brink of the marsh. The lilies waved what seemed but a band's breadth from him. But he stooped, he reached—Oh, could anything so foolish happen as that he could not get them! Or, more foolish still, plunge in to the knees! He straightened from his fruitless effort, drew back, but before she could think what he was about he had leaned for ward again, flashed out his cane, and with three quick, cutting slashes the lilies were mown. It was deftly, delicately, astonishingly done, but it gave her a singular shock, as if she had seen a hawk strike its prey. He drew them cleverly toward him in the crook of his cane, took them up daintily in his fingers, and returned to her across the shallow valley. She waited him with mixed emotions.

"Oh, how could you!" she murmured, as he put them into her hand. He looked at her in amused astonishment. "Why, aren't they right?"

They were as clean clipped off and as perfect as if the daintiest hand had plucked them.

"Oh, yes," she admitted, "they're lovely, but I don't like the way you got them."

"I took the means I had," he objected.

"I don't think I like it."

His whole face was sparkling with interest and amusement. "Is that so? Why not?"

"You're too—too"—she cast about for the word—"too terribly resourceful!"

"I see," he said. If she had feared he would laugh, it showed how little she had gauged the limits of his laughter. He only looked at her rather more intently than he had before.

"But, my good child, resourcefulness is a very natural instinct. I am afraid you read more into it than is there. You wanted the flowers, I had a stick, and in my youth I was taught to strike clean and straight. I am really a very simple fellow."

Looking him in the eyes, which were of a clear, candid gray, she was ready to believe it. It seemed as if he had let her look for a moment through his manner, his ironies, his armor of indifference, to the frank foundations of his nature.

"But, you see, the trouble is you don't in the least look it," she argued.

"So you think because I have a long face and wild hair that I am a sinister person? My dear Miss Gilsey, the most desperate character I ever knew was five feet high and wore mutton-chop whiskers. It is an uncertain business judging men by their appearance."

As soon as silence fell between them she saw that wave of preoccupation which had submerged him during their walk from the parade-ground to the Purdies' rising over him again and floating him away from her. He no longer even looked at her. His eyes were on the ground, and it was not until they had crossed the open expanse of the shallow valley and were climbing toward the avenue of cypress that she found courage to put her question.

"Have you and Mr. Cressy met before?"

He raised his head with a jerk and looked at her over the top of his glass. "I may have to stay longer if you want to hear about it."

"Do you mind if I answer your question American fashion by asking another?" he said presently. "What put it into your head that we may have met before?"

"The way you looked at each other at the club, and again this morning."

Kerr shook his head. "You are an obscure young person! The fact is, I've never met him—of that I'm certain, but I believe I've seen him before, and for the life of me, I can't think where. At the moment you spoke I was trying to remember."

"Was it in this country?" Flora prompted, hopeful of finding something definite out of this vagueness.

"No, it was years ago. It must have been in England." He looked at her inquiringly, as if he expected her to help him.

"Oh, Harry's been in England," she said quickly, and then, with a flashing thought, came to her the one scene Harry had mentioned in his English experience. Was it at a ball? Idol, and no questions asked."

"Oh!" she said. And again, "Oh, is that all?" She was disappointed.

"I don't see why you and the major should have been so mysterious about that."

"So you're not going to tell me?" Kerr remarked, and she came back to a sudden consciousness of how her face must have reflected her thought.

"No—not this time!" she said, smiling, though somewhat flushed.

He knitted his brows at her. They had reached the arched gate, and the car that would carry her home was approaching.

"Ah, then, I am afraid it will be never," he said.

Was it possible this was their last meeting? Did he mean he was going away? The question formed in her mind, but there was no time for words. He had stopped the car with a flick of his agile cane, and handed her in as if he had handed her into a carriage; and not a word as to whether they would see each other again though she hoped and hesitated to the last moment.

CHAPTER V.

On Guard.

He had so disturbed her, his presence had so obliterated other presences and annihilated time, that it took an encounter with Clara to remind her of her arrangement for the evening. The dance? No, she had given that up.

She had promised Harry to be at home. Clara wanted to know rather austere what she intended to do about the dinner. This was dreadful! Flora had forgotten it completely.

Nothing to be done but go, and leave a message for Harry—apology, and assurance that she would be home early. She wondered if she were losing her memory.

She appeared to be changing altogether, for the dinner—a merry one—bored her. What she wanted was to get away from it as soon as possible for that interesting evening.

When she had made the appointment with Harry she had been excited by the thought that he might tell her whether he had learned anything from the major that morning in the matter of the ring. But now she was more engrossed with the idea of asking about Kerr—whether Harry had really met him—if so, where; and, finally, why did not Harry want her to mention that embassy ball?

Primed with these questions, she left immediately after coffee, arriving at her own red stone portal at ten. But coming in, all a-flutter with the idea of having kept him waiting when she had so much to ask, she found her note as she had left it. She questioned Shima. There had been no message from Mr. Cressy. Her first annoyance was lost in wonder. What could be the matter?

She went into the drawing room—a dull-pink, stupendous chamber—knelt a moment before the flaming wood fire, then rose, and crossing to the window, looked anxiously out. She had a flight of fancy towards accidents, but in that case she would certainly have heard. The French clock on the mantel rang half-past ten. The sound had hardly died in the great spaces before she heard the fine snarl of the electric bell.

She restrained an impulse to dart into the hall, and stood impatient in the middle of the room.

He came in hastily, his lips all ready with words which hesitated at sight of her.

"Why, you're going out!" he said.

He had forgotten the cloak that still hung from her shoulders.

"No, I've just come in, and all my fine apologies for being out are wasted. How long do you think Clara'll let you stop at this hour?"

"Clara isn't here," he said.

"Well, then, your time is all the shorter." She was nettled that he should be oblivious of his lapse.

"I'm sorry," he said, arriving at last at his apology. "I couldn't help being late. I've had a day of it." He drew his hand across his forehead, and she noticed that he was in his morning clothes and looked as rumpled and flurried as a man just from the office.

She retented. "Poor dear! You do look tired! Don't take that chair. It's more Louis Quinze than comfortable. Come into the library. And remember," she added, when Shima had set the decanter and glasses beside him, "you are to stay just 20 minutes."

He took a sip of his drink and looked at her over the top of his glass. "I may have to stay longer if you want to hear about it."

"Oh, Harry, you really know something! All the evening I've heard nothing but the wildest rumors. Some say Maj. Purdie couldn't speak because some one 'way up knows more than she should about it. And some body else said it wasn't the real ring at all that was taken, only a paste copy, and that is why they're not doing more about getting it back."

"Not doing more about getting it back?" Harry laughed. "Is that the idea that generally prevails? Why, Flora—" He stopped, waited a moment while she leaned forward expectant. "Flora," he began again, "are you mum?"

She nodded, breathless.

"Not a word to Clara?"

"Oh, of course not."

"Well—" He twisted around in his chair the better to face her. "To-morrow there will be published a reward of $20,000 for the return of the Crew Idol, and no questions asked."

"Oh!" she said. And again, "Oh, is that all?" She was disappointed.

"I don't see why you and the major should have been so mysterious about that."

Flora leaned forward with knitted brows. "Yes, I can see that, but still, just among ourselves, this morning—"

Harry smiled. "You've lost sight of the fact that it is just among ourselves the thing has happened."

"Oh, oh! Now you're ridiculous!"

"I might be, if the thing had happened any where but in this town; but think a moment. How much do we know of the people we meet, where they were, who they were, before they came here? There's a case in point. It was not quite among ourselves this morning."

"Harry, how horrid of you!" She was on the point of declaring that she knew Kerr very well indeed; but she remembered this might not be the thing to say to Harry.

"My dear girl. I'm not saying anything against him. I only remarked that we did not know him."

"Don't you, Harry?"

He gave her a quick look. "Why, what put that into your head?"

"I—I don't know. I thought you looked at him very hard last night in the picture gallery. And afterward, at supper, don't you remember, you did not want me to mention your connection with something or other she was talking about?"

"Something or other he was talking about?" Harry inquired with a frowning smile.

"I think it was about that embassy ball—"

"I didn't want you to mention the embassy ball?" he repeated, and now he was only smiling. "My dear child, surely you are dreaming."

She looked at him with the bewildered feeling that he was flatly contradicting himself. And yet she could remember he had not shaken his head at her. He had only nodded. Could it be that her cherished imagination had played her a trick at last? But the next moment it occurred to her that somehow she had been led away from her first question.

"Then have you seen him, Harry?" she insisted.

"No!" He jerked it out so sharply that it startled her, but she stuck to her subject.

"And you wouldn't have minded my telling him you had been at that ball?"

There was a pause while Harry looked at the fire. Then—"Look here," he burst out, "did he ask you about it?"

"Oh, no," she protested. "I only just happened to wonder."

He stared at her as if he would have liked to shake her. But then he rose from his frowning attitude before the fire, came over to her, sat on the arm of her chair, and, with the tip of one finger under her chin, lifted her face; but she did not lift her eyes. She heard only his voice, very low, with a caressing note that she hardly knew as Harry's.

"It isn't that I care what you say to him. The fact is, Flora, I suppose I was a little jealous, but I naturally don't like the suggestion that you would discuss me with a stranger."

She raised her eyes. "Certainly I should not discuss you with him."

"Harry, how you do dislike him!"

"Well, suppose I do?" he shrugged.

"You've used up twice your 20 minutes," she said, "and Clara will be scandalized."

"Now, really, you must go home," she urged, trying to rise.

"But look here," he protested, still on the arm of her chair, "there's another thing I want to ask you about."

And by the tip of one finger he lifted her left hand shining with rings.

"You will have to have another one of these, you know. It's been on my mind for a week. Is there any sort you haven't already?"

She held up her hand to the light and fluttered its glitter.

"Any one that you gave me would be different from the others, wouldn't it?" she asked prettily.

"Oh, that's very nice of you, Flora, but I want to find you something new. When shall we look for it? To-morrow, in the morning?"

"Yes, I should love it," she answered, but with no particular enthusiasm, for the idea of shopping with Harry, and shopping at Shrove's, did not present a wide field of possibility. "But I have a luncheon to-morrow," she added, "so we must make it as early as ten."

"Oh, you two!"

At Clara's mildly reproving voice so close beside them both started like conspirators. They had not heard her come in, yet there she was, just inside the doorway, still wrapped in her cloak. But there was none of the impetus of arrested motion in her attitude. She stood at repose as if

"That palmist will tell you when you are going to die."

"And then run and tell the undertaker, I suppose, and get a commission on the business."

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few mattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalds. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Mrs. Joseph Kossman, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."

Speaking of Fires.

Roy Bone, a brother of United States District Attorney Harry Bone, several years ago was a reporter on the Wichita Beacon. In going to a fire one of the members of the fire department was thrown from a hose cart and killed. Bone wrote a head, with this as the first deck: "Gone to His Last Fire."

The piece got into the paper and Bone was promptly "fired."—Kansas City Journal.

WHITE SERGE IN THE TUB

If Washing is Done Carefully the Skirt Will Look Like New; Directions.

With the present vogue of white serge suits, a few ideas on their cleaning may be of interest to the woman whose skirts are beginning to show signs of wear.

Have no hesitation whatever about tubbing the skirt. It will shrink, of course, so it may be wise to rip the hem before washing, because, supposing the skirt fits the hips very smoothly at present, then in all probability it will be necessary to draw up the skirt an inch or two to make it set properly over the hips.

This would necessitate cutting it off from the top, and as the skirt will also shrink in length, the rest of the hem will be needed on the bottom and a facing used when making the new hem.

Make a warm suds with water and white soap, adding a little borax. Immerse the skirt and souse up and down, rubbing any very soiled places with the hands.

When clear it should be rinsed in clear lukewarm water and borax, then hung up to dry. First, turn wrong side out and pin to the line at waistband directly in center front.

Keep the fold down the center front and pin the hem to the line. Then put two or three pins between the belt and hem.

As it dries the folds should be smoothed, and, if necessary, the skirt pulled into shape.

When almost perfectly dry press on the wrong side with a warm iron, put on a skirt hanger and put out in the air or sun.

Carefully done, the skirt will look like new.

The Wash Tub.—Did you ever try paraffin for mending a leaky wash tub? When ours sprung a leak some time ago we emptied it, dried it well with a cloth, and poured melted paraffin around the cracks. It has been in constant use ever since without leaking.

When the washing is done the tub should be put upside down on the basement floor, a little water poured over the bottom, and they never will dry out and fall to pieces.

The Wash Boiler.—When putting the boiler away, wipe it as dry as possible and always place it upside down. In this way it will last for years. This hint was given me by an old boiler mender and I never have had to have my boiler repaired since.

To Wash Clothes Lines.—A good way to wash clothes lines is to wind them on a long board and scrub them with a scrubbing brush. You will find that in this way you keep them from getting tangled. It is so hard to wind them when you wash them in the tub.

Fading Caused by Hot Irons.—Fading is caused by too hot irons. The fading of colored articles is due often not to the washing, but the ironing. Too hot irons are used directly on the material and this will fade delicate colors more than any amount of washing.

The effect is even worse than strong sunlight. Be sure that the iron is evenly dampened and that the iron is only hot enough to smooth the wrinkles properly by firm, even pressure and you will have no more trouble from fading. Skirts must never be ironed across the gores, but up and down; otherwise the fit of the garment is ruined.—Chicago Tribune.

English in London.—Senator Depew, on the deck of the Lusitania, talked about "English as she is spoken in London."

"It is very difficult to understand that London English," he said. "I know a man who had lodgings all July in Bloomsbury, near the British museum.

"On his return from the museum one afternoon, my friend said to his landlady:

"Can I have a cup of tea, if you please?"

"Certainly, sir; at once," the landlady replied. "The kettle 'as been boilin' for 'ours.'

"But—er—I prefer freshly boiled water, if you don't mind," stammered my friend.

The landlady reddened with anger.

"Look 'ere," she said, "if I 'ad meant wot you mean I'd 'ave said hours."

PRESSED HARD.

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in a Southern state says: "My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum. I was so pleased with it that, after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal; the whole family liked it so well that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but in a more marked degree in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

A Twentieth Century Kingmaker

by Fred A. Boalt

Two years ago Andrew Belton, twenty-six years old, went from London to Morocco on an impulse, kicked Aziz off the throne put Mulai Hafid on it and returned to London by the next boat.

Now he is twiddling his thumbs and waiting for something to turn up in the king making line. Kaid Belton—to give him his correct title—is the newest thing in twentieth century kingmakers.

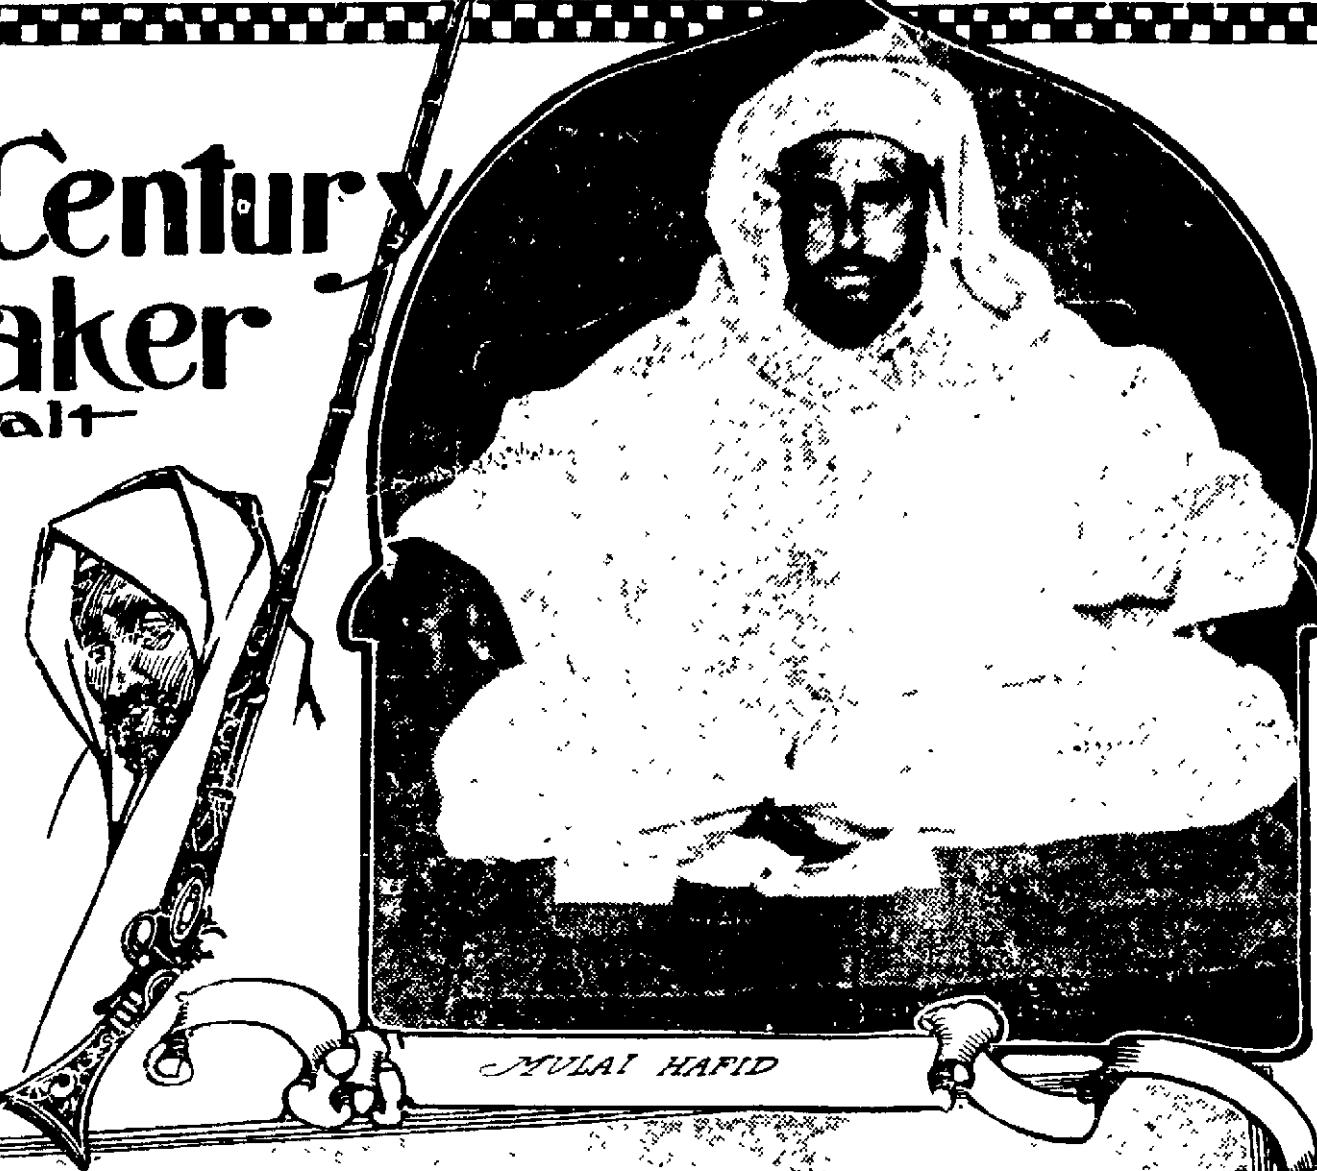

Belton was in South Africa

He came to London on six months' leave

Two weeks of London legs and drizzle and the next set of half year of inactivity filled him with regret.

Then a friend wrote him that he had been contracted by a syndicate to secure a ruling concession in Morocco from a pretender to the throne named Mulai Hafid. Would Belton like to go along?

He met the friend in Tangier, and the two were joined by a third Englishman, Redman, who had been brought up in Morocco, knew the natives and spoke Arabic fluently.

At Larache, a port eighty miles south of Tangier, they succeeded, by the aid of the British vice consul, in hiring mules to take them to Alcazar, a town twenty miles inland, which was held by the troops of Sultan Aziz.

The sultan had issued an edict forbidding natives to assist Europeans. Their muleteer refused to go further than Alcazar, as the tribes were carrying on the jihad (holy war) against the Christians. So they employed a notorious brigand and horsethief, one Abselem, to take them through to Fez.

Dressed as Moorish women, the Englishmen reached the gates of Fez on July 13, to be informed that the pretender and his court had arrived three days before.

Next morning they sent a messenger to the grand vizier that three Englishmen desired an audience with the sultan. At noon the following day two soldiers came to them from the vizier and escorted them to a house which had been placed at their disposal at Mulai Hafid's order.

They remained indoors until the 18th, when a mounted escort conducted them to the palace.

Arrayed as Moors of the highest class, they were received by Kaid Meshwar, the master of ceremonies, who carried a tall wand with a silver knob, and who preceded them up a staircase and into a long narrow room, where, at the further end, sat Mulai Hafid, cross-legged on a dark green velvet couch.

His two viziers, El Glawi and Si Aissa, were sitting on his left. Walking slowly the kaid advanced to within three paces of the throne, bowed, introduced the Englishmen simply as three strangers anxious for an audience, bowed thrice, and retired a little way.

The pretender smilingly motioned them to be seated on three chairs placed on his right, and then said "Marrhaba bi kum" ("You are welcome").

Belton's first impression was that he had never seen a hand-somer man. This is his description of him: "A very high, broad forehead with large, dark eyes full of light which sparkle with genuine merriment when he is amused, a big, straight nose, fairly full cheeks, a square, resolute jaw, and the firmest of mouths set off by a black beard and a small mustache. His complexion is a deep olive, and when he stood up I saw he was well over six feet in height and finely proportioned to a magnificent physique." He came to business at once.

"Why are you in Fez?" he asked.

The concession was denied, the price stated, and the pretender ordered Si Aissa to go into the matter further.

"And you?" questioned Mulai Hafid, pointing to Belton.

"I am a soldier," said the future kingmaker.

"I have come to offer my services."

"Alah, Alah!" the pretender repeated very slowly, then asked many questions.

Then came Redman's turn. What did he want? It would be useful to Belton as a khalifa (right-hand man).

The 25th Belton and Redman were again summoned to the pretender, this time in an enclosure close by the palace where 4,000 troops—infantry, cavalry and artillery—were drawn up and waiting.

"Here are some of my soldiers," the pretender said. "See what you can do with them."

The boy—he was little more—was game. The maneuvers that afternoon were distinctly "smart." At the finish he was given command over 7,000 troops of all arms.

He made those half-wild tribesmen drill as they had never drilled before. He overhauled the arsenal and government stores. He wrote to his commanding officer in South Africa tendering his resignation. He was no longer Lieut. Belton of a British regiment of infantry, he was Kaid Belton.

The mahalla of Aziz at Alcazar deserted and proclaimed Mulai Hafid sultan. The event swelled the pretender's army by 1,200 fighting men. All through the fall and winter Belton worked on his raw material, and by spring had a superb fighting force, disciplined as well as fearless.

In June of last year Aziz dispatched a strong mahalla to march against Marrakesh. Belton, with 15,000 men and artillery, met the sultan's army within four hours of Marrakesh, routed it with heavy loss, and scattered it. Aziz himself only escaped by hasty flight to Settat, the nearest French military post, from which he afterwards journeyed to Casablanca under a French escort.

The tribes and towns proclaimed Mulai Hafid sultan amid great rejoicing. He on learning of the victory of his southern mahalla, notified the diplomatic corps at Tangier of his wish to be recognized by the powers of Europe and assuring them of his readiness to accept the act of Algeria.

The whole of the diplomatic corps, with one exception, ignored the communication. The exception was Dr. Vassel, the German consul, who recognized Mulai Hafid as the rightful ruler of Morocco.

On Sept. 10 Belton received from the hands of Mulai Hafid his commission, giving him control over the whole of the army and conferring upon him the title of Kaid of Ashaar (kaid of the troops).

Aziz was safe in Tangier, but his brother, Mulai Mohammed, whom Aziz had imprisoned when he came to the throne, had been released and was starting another revolution in Casablanca. Belton met and defeated Mulai Mohammed's army and took him prisoner.

That was in October of last year. On Nov. 18 Mulai Mohammed was brought to Bab el Buchat, where Mulai Hafid was. On the following morning in the presence of 4,000 of Belton's troops, Mulai Abselem M'rani, an uncle of Mulai Hafid, was tried for treason by the cadis. He had been in treasonable correspondence with Mulai Mohammed.

The cadis found him guilty and sentenced him to have the palms of his hands cut and sewn in a single leather glove, so that he could write no more letters. The punishment was carried out.

That same day Belton took his courage in both hands and addressed Sultan Mulai Hafid in this wise: "You are still waiting for European recognition. You will wait long if you continue such practices. The powers will hear of this punishment through the French press which is hostile to you."

The resounding had its effect. A week later Mulai Hafid saw the uncle. The glove had been taken off his hands and the wounds were almost healed.

One by one the power recognized Mulai Hafid, and Kaid Belton was an amused witness of a big of war between the diplomats of Germany, France and Spain who were all pulling for favors and concessions from the man they had been so loath to recognize. Naturally, Dr. Vassel, the German consul, was the new sultan's favorite. German subsidies got valuable mining concessions which France wanted.

France, irritated by repeated belching in the mission which had been with Aziz at the time of his defeat, this time threatened Belton's supremacy. The sultan gave him an opening.

"You looked worried, commander, when I saw you on parade. What is wrong?" he asked.

Kaid Belton replied: "I am worried. Are these French officers going to serve under me, or am I going to serve under them?"

"I cannot give you an answer to any of those questions tonight," the sultan replied, "but what ever happens, remember this, that people who are forced on me will never be my friends."

That very night Belton dispatched a mahalla against Ait Yussi, who was plundering caravans and travelers. The force was held in check by tribesmen and the sultan ordered Belton to conduct the campaign against the bandit in person.

He went reluctantly, for the court was tense with intrigue and the French were straining every nerve to get their military mission established.

He caught up with Ait Yussi and after five hours of hard fighting defeated him, compelled him to surrender and collected heavy indemnities. Then he hurried back to Fez, wondering what his enemies had been doing in his absence.

Omuncus news awaited his return. Germany had agreed to give France a free hand in Morocco or condition that Germany's commerce was not restricted. The French minister had visited Fez.

Belton went straight to the sultan who said:

"You have heard the news?"

"The agreement? Yes. It was a surprise to me."

"A greater surprise to me," the sultan replied.

Germany had kept, not only the sultan, but her own consul Dr. Vassel, in ignorance of the negotiations. While Dr. Vassel was assuring the sultan that Germany would not desert him in his time of need, Germany was doing that very thing. Neither knew the thing was going to be done until after it was done.

Then in six weeks Belton spent in studying French diplomacy. The French officers shunned him, cut him, described him as a renegade. The sultan replied to these slanders that Belton had served him well. The French replied that French officers would serve him equally well.

The sultan refused flatly to part with Belton.

In the spring there were uprisings, which Belton put down. At Fez the undercurrent of intrigue continued to flow, and the French were clearly in the ground. The treasury was empty. The creditors of Aziz were clamoring to be paid. France was the chief creditor, and the French were offering further loans.

Belton, like the power of the bandit tribes and posted back to Fez. He demanded to see the sultan. An audience was refused. He waited days and weeks, repeating his demand. He appealed to the grand vizier, reciting what he had done in the sultan's service. The hardships he had borne and the vicissitudes and the dangers had turned his hair white. His health was broken.

The sultan would not see him, would not even talk. He worried, harassed and bullied by the French, was ashamed to face the young Englishman who had placed him on the throne and confess to him that he had no choice but to let him go.

The resounding had its effect. A week later Mulai Hafid saw the uncle. The glove had been taken off his hands and the wounds were almost healed.

MADE FROM MELONS

DAINTIES WITH WHICH ALL ARE NOT FAMILIAR.

Recipes for Sherbets from the Fruit and Preserves From the Rind—The Proper Way to Serve Canteloupe.

Tempting sherbets are made from both canteloupe and watermelon. There are conserves to be made of the rinds, perhaps in combination with another fruit or a vegetable. There are salads which may be concocted by adding to melons, cut into small cubes, a sprinkling of nuts and a spoonful of mayonnaise.

But first catch your melon. A ripe canteloupe can be told by an examination of the stem end. Break a small piece from this and see if the melon is fragrant. If it smells spicy the melon is ripe. It is a mistake to put ice into a canteloupe, as is generally done. This takes away considerably from the sweetness of the melon meat. The canteloupe should be served in a bed of cracked ice. A toothsome dessert is made by filling a canteloupe skin with vanilla ice cream and pouring over the ice cream a mild ginger syrup.

For Watermelon Sherbet—Boil a pound of sugar and a quart of water together for 10 minutes. Add two tablespoonsfuls of gelatine which has been soaked in a half cupful of cold water for an hour, then when dissolved, strain and pour into the freezer. Add one pint of orange juice and freeze. When nearly frozen add two cupfuls of pink watermelon dice, and let stand packed in ice and salt for an hour and a half.

In making canteloupe sherbet, soak one teaspoonful of gelatine in a half cup of cold water for an hour. Add one-half cup boiling water. When the gelatine is quite dissolved, add one cupful of cold water, three-fourths cup of sugar, and the mashed pulp and juice of a melon about the size of a cocoanut.

Pickled canteloupes are not found on the average table. But they certainly deserve a place there. These belong to the sweet pickle variety. Select melons not quite ripe. Cut into oblong pieces, take off the rind and soft parts near the seeds. To every eight pounds of melon allow one pint vinegar and three pounds of sugar. Mix half a teaspoonful each ground mace and cloves and one teaspoonful each cinnamon, ginger and allspice. Tie in little piece of cheesecloth and scald with the vinegar. Cook the melons in the hot syrup until tender, then skim out into a bowl. Boil the liquor down and pour over the melon. Repeat this three or four times, and the last time heat the melon with the syrup. Put into jars and seal.

An excellent conserve of melon rinds can be made. Pare off the green part of the melon rind and all the pink, cut into inch pieces, shaping as desired and weigh. For five pounds of the rind allow one quart of water and a pint of vinegar. Scald the water and vinegar, add the rind and boil 10 minutes. Remove the rind with a skimmer and drain perfectly dry.

Place in the preserving kettle a pint of water and 3½ pounds of sugar. Boil, skim, add the melon pieces and two ounces green ginger cut in slices. Cook until the melon is clear and tender, remove with a skimmer and put in glass jars. Boil the syrup 10 or 15 minutes longer, fill the jars with hot syrup and seal.

Victoria Sandwiches.

Two eggs and their weight in flour and sugar, two tablespoons of milk, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one teaspoon vanilla. Beat the eggs and sugar well together for 15 minutes, mix flour and baking powder together and pass through a sieve. Then mix all well together and add the milk and pour it into round tins or soup plates well buttered, spread flat with a knife and bake for seven minutes, placing on the open grid shelf in the middle of the oven under the hot plate, and only have gas flames half an inch long. If it does not quickly brown in the oven, place it under the grill on top of the oven for two minutes.

When baked place one round on the top of the other and spread jam between. Allow it to cool, then cut out in diamond shape and decorate with white icing or pink, or two different colored jellies or jams on top.

Not That Meaning.

"The doctor said that Bill was drunk when we took the poor fellow to have his head attended to last night after he fell."

"Doctor never said anything of the kind!"

"Didn't I hear him? Said it was a jagged cut."

Few Marriages in London.

The marriages of London last year represent the lowest percentage of which there is any record.

Tutti-Frutti Cheese.

Beat one package of cream cheese with a quarter of a cup of sweet cream, chop a dozen large table raisins, a strip of citron, six candied cherries, one candied apricot, a small piece of candied pineapple, a grating of lemon peel, a dash of nutmeg, a tablespoonful of apricot brandy, and a teaspoonful of sugar. Mix well, then mould and chill, cut in small squares when ready to use and serve with buttered toast for afternoon tea or with luncheon dessert.

Towel Box.

If there are no drawers for holding the surplus stock of dish towels, handkerchiefs, cleaning cloths and the like, which should always be in readiness, get a comfortable seat, hang the cover on binges, pad the top of it and cover with blue denim, then you will have a suitable receptacle.

To Bake Potatoes Quickly.

In order to bake potatoes quickly, boil them first ten minutes in salt water before putting them in the oven.

Post Toasties with cream.

Crisp, golden-brown "crinkly" bits, made from white corn.

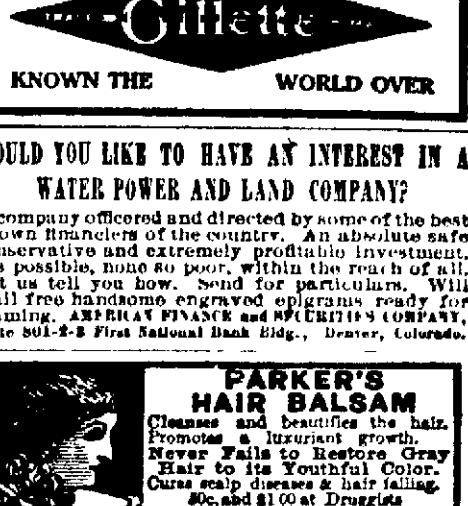

A most appetizing, convenient, pleasurable breakfast.
